Marine Cruelty Bared

Nine Instructors Tormented 'Boots'

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (UP)—The Marine Corps confirmed Saturday that nine drill instructors at this training base were court-martialed for maltreatment of recruits during the 15 months preceding a "disciplinary" march which led to the death of six marines in a swamp.

A four-member court of inquiry is looking into the night manoeuvre last Sunday in which six marine "boots" drowned when a drill instructor led his platoon into a chilly, tide-swollen swamp bordering this huge recruit training base.

S.Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon, 31, called the platoon out of the barracks but claimed he did so only to instill "discipline." The court of inquiry heard two witnesses Saturday, including Capt. Richard P. Grey, commanding officer of the company which included McKeon's platoon.

VERDICT MONDAY

Capt. Ralph Wood, Parris Island public information officer, said he did not expect the court to announce its findings "before Monday evening at the earliest."

Wood said six of the nine courts-martial since Jan. 1, 1955, for maltreatment resulted in convictions of the drill instructors but added that he did not recall the penalties levied on those found guilty.

Wood refused to disclose any details of the courts-martial, saying that he did not feel they should be made public from here.

In Washington, it was disclosed that one of the six convictions involved a sergeant accused of jumping on a recruit's stomach, kicking others in the stomach and chest, and beating a marine with a swagger stick.

The sergeant was given six months at hard labor and dishonorably discharged after being found guilty on 10 counts of cruelty and maltreatment.

TOUGHENING MUSCLES

Witnesses testified at the court-martial that the drill instructor jumped on a recruit's stomach 19 times while the youth was lying on the ground doing exercises. The sergeant claimed he was only trying to toughen the marine's stomach muscles.

On another occasion, the sergeant allegedly "mule-kicked" a recruit in the chest. He was also accused of hitting a marine 19 times with a swagger stick because it was the witness' 19th birthday. The sergeant admitted striking the boy but said it was only a light tap.

The Sunday night "death march" here brought a warning from Mayor Orville L. Hubbard of Dearborn, Mich., an ex-marine, that he would drive the Marine Corps out of his city if the court tries to "whitewash" the incident.

Where Are Jobs?

Everybody Rushes For $800-a-Month

VANCOUVER (CP)—A flood of workers from every section of British Columbia, seeking $800 a month jobs on the Distant Early Warning radar line, has rolled over employment offices throughout B.C., National Employment Service officials said Saturday.

William Horrobin, regional employment officer for B.C. and the Yukon, said applicants are "writing, wiring and visiting our offices and there's nothing we can do for them."

"We have 22 offices in B.C. and the Yukon and they're all howling . . . that the applications are piling up."

The flood started almost immediately after a recent report from Ottawa telling of civilian jobs paying as much as $800 a month open to Canadians on the DEW line.

The United States agency operating the line promised to list job requirements with the NES but hasn't done so yet, Mr. Horrobin said.

British Policy Coming

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Anthony Eden's government is formulating a new policy to save the peace in the Middle East and bolster waning British prestige in the strategic region, informed sources said yesterday.

The new policy is designed to hold fast to present friends, win uncommitted nations away from Egypt's anti-Western bloc, and hold the line in future rows in the Middle East power struggle, observers reported.

Children Found Slain

HALIFAX (CP)—A month-old infant was stabbed to death Saturday night in a north-end tenement and its mother, whom police refuse to identify, was later admitted to a mental hospital.

Police said a charge may be laid later.

The woman went to a doctor and a clergyman before being taken into custody by police. She was examined by a psychiatrist and admitted to the Nova Scotia provincial mental hospital.

Her husband, who found the child's body on the floor of their apartment, was treated in hospital for shock.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Two young children today were strangled in their home with two pieces of clothesline.

Police charged their adoptive mother, Mrs. Mary Campbell, 45, with murder. She was reported to have tried also to take her own life by slashing her wrists. She is to be arraigned Monday.

Paul, 11, and Martina, 9, adopted children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell, were found dead by police. Mr. Campbell, a clerk in a London law firm, was away at the time.

Police said preliminary investigations indicated the mother had suffered a mental breakdown but she appeared composed when taken into custody.

Startling Disclosure

Warships Can't Berth To Load At New Rocky Point Arsenal

Lighters Needed For All Operations

Canada's new multi-million dollar naval arsenal at Rocky Point cannot load ammunition aboard a single warship from its jetty, naval authorities last night told Tom Green, Colonist Ottawa correspondent.

RCN ships cannot berth at the jetty, but must be serviced by lighters brought from Esquimalt each time a ferry operation to and from the naval magazine to the vessels is needed.

In all heavy weather, loading or unloading operations at the exposed promontory would have to be suspended completely, they said.

The startling disclosure about the magazine that Defence Minister Ralph Campney has lauded as better than anything Russia or the Commonwealth has to offer, followed a series of questions put on the House of Commons order paper by Major-General G. R. Pearkes, VC, MP.

SAFETY PRECAUTION

It was learned by the Colonist that the arsenal jetty was designed for loading by lighters, following an intensive survey which failed to turn up a site suitable for berthing heavy warships yet was out of danger's way from Victoria should the $5,000,000 arsenal be attacked.

General Pearkes, who has strongly opposed the site, about 20 miles from Victoria, since it was chosen over three years ago, is seeking information about the cost of construction of the jetty and its suitability for amunitioning and de-ammunition RCN vessels

He also is inquiring about the suitability of the lighters employed from Esquimalt for the purpose.

Reports when the jetty was being constructed in 1954 said it would cost in the neighborhood of $115,000.

CAMPNEY'S PRAISE

The magazine, replacing the old ammunition dump at Colwood to fill all ordnance demands of Pacific Command ships, was lauded by Mr. Campney last July as "the finest magazine in the Commonwealth."

"I doubt if the Russians have anything better," he said on a visit here.

Sharply opposite view has been taken all along by General Pearkes, who has criticized the site for being exposed and difficult to defend.

He was quoted three years ago as saying: "As it is outside the inner defences of Esquimalt harbor, ships that come into Esquimalt harbor will be required to move around to Rocky Point."

". . . it will mean that the vessels which have been in Esquimalt will have to go out again" over the "considerable distance" in a time-wasting operation to load ammunition, he said then.

SITE DEFENDED

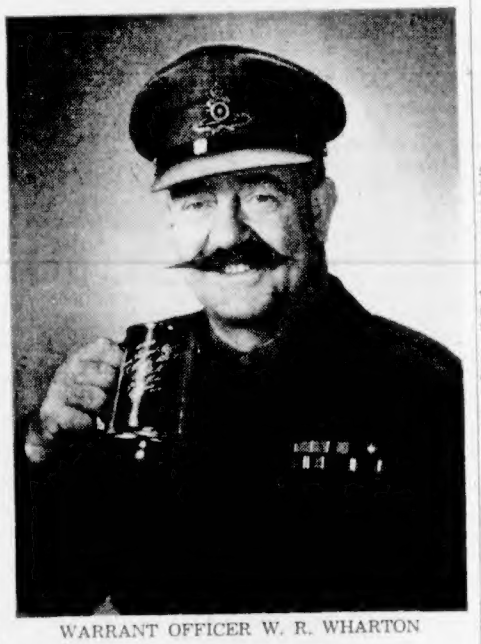
Campney had defended the site as being far enough out for safety purposes, with suitable terrain for the type of construction planned, yet close to Esquimalt "which facilitates transportation of ammunition from ships coming in for maintenance or overhaul."

The arsenal, including the magazines, jetty, laboratories and the mile of asbestos-lined passageways that connect them, cost $5,000,000. It covers 3,000 acres near William head.

General Pearkes has said that the total cost of construction of buildings, ammunition stores and jetties of the Colwood ammunition dump in 1939 was $413,742, "insofar as existing records show."

Reason for moving the dump was that the area was becoming too close to heavily populated districts for safety.

Retires in Good Order



WARRANT OFFICER W. R. WHARTON

Steps Down

'The Bull' at Ease After 30 Years

W. R. "The Bull" Wharton pulled at his waxed handlebar mustache and sank into his "lazyboy" chair.

One of the best-known warrant officers in the Canadian army, whom many Victorians never knew to spend an idle moment, retired in Edmonton last week after more than 30 years' service. He was presented with a "lazyboy" chair and inscribed mug by fellow members of the sergeants' mess.

"The Bull," who looked it, was known here and all over Canada in military and sporting circles.

He joined the 5th Heavy Battery (Coastal Defence) here in 1930, and served with the unit until going overseas in 1939 to assist in the formation of the 1st Canadian Army Reinforcement Unit as garrison sergeant-major. More than 80,000 men passed through the unit while he was in that position, from outbreak of hostilities until 1946.

A member of the Canadian rugby team which toured Japan in 1932, he captained the Victoria team against the New Zealand "All Blacks" in 1936. He was captain of the team from 1931 until his retirement from sports in 1937.

WO1 Wharton was born in Ulverston, England, in 1904. He joined the King's Own Royal Lancashire Regiment in 1926, and in 1924 transferred to the King's Own Royal Coldstream Guards with whom he served until leaving for Canada in 1927.

Since the war, he has been garrison sergeant-major at three army camps, the last being at Headquarters, Western Command, Edmonton.

Special Session Possible

PENTICTON (CP) — A special session of the B.C. legislature will be called this fall if necessary to draft new forest management legislation, Premier Bennett said Friday night.

He said date of the session will depend on when the Sloan report on the B.C. forest industry is presented to him.

"We will take the time to consider it but if there is an urgent call for new legislation then a special session or an earlier session than usual will be called," he said in an interview.

The premier said he is anxious to get B.C.'s questioned forest program going again "on a permanent basis that is fair to everyone."

Canadian Beavers Missing, Grace in Palace Seclusion

MONTE CARLO (CP) — Grace Kelly and a couple of Canadian beavers were among the more elusive elements in Monaco yesterday as the principality started a weekend of celebration in preparation for the American actress' wedding next week to Prince Rainier III.

Miss Kelly arrived two days earlier, but since then, many of her American friends with personal invitations to the wedding have discovered that the walls of Rainier's palace are even thicker than they look.

Neither the guests—nor even the bridesmaids — have managed an exchange of hellos with their friend since she took up residence in the 120-room palace overlooking the Mediterranean. The palace switchboard has stalled all efforts to get through to the princess-to-be.

Meanwhile, Jean Bruchesi, a Canadian guest who is a member of Monaco's literary council, had an appointment at the palace yesterday. He said he would try to find out what happened to the two beavers which the city of Granby, Que., sent across the ocean by air as a wedding gift.

"I know they have left Quebec and I have heard a rumor that they have arrived in Nice," he told a reporter Friday night, "but I have so far been unable to trace them."

The living Canadian national emblems were last reported in Paris, where they landed Thursday after a flight from Montreal. But Bruchesi, an historian who also is Quebec's deputy provincial secretary, wasn't too worried.

"I feel sure that any conversation I may have with Prince Rainier will concern beavers," he said, "for he is a keen zoologist."

PIERRE AND PIERRETTE

Vancouver First in Canada To Have Pay-as-You-See TV

VANCOUVER (CP)—J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, said yesterday Vancouver will be the first city in Canada to get "pay-as-you-see" television movies.

He was here to arrange for a studio location that will transmit regular feature movies by direct wire into Vancouver homes. It will be the first closed domestic circuit of a commercial scale on the continent, he said.

"We will be surprised if we're not in operation by this time next year. The day of the small neighborhood theatre is finished," he said.

Subscribers will be able to obtain the service by depositing coins in a "telemeter" box on the back of television sets.

Vancouver was selected for the experiment because "it is recognized as the toughest marketing city on the continent.

"If it works here," he added, "it will have a good chance elsewhere."

Community Service — Starting Friday

Flower Sharing To Cheer Patients

Bouquets of bright yellow daffodils will carry the breath of spring into the wards of Victoria's two major hospitals this week as The Daily Colonist again sponsors the popular Share the Flowers plan.

Daffodils from springtime gardens in the Greater Victoria area will be collected Friday and distributed by the Colonist among patients in Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals.

For the third successive year the plan is being organized by the Colonist as a community service.

Share the Flowers gives Victoria residents an opportunity of sharing the overflow of blooms from their gardens with hospital patients deprived of the pleasures of gardening.

The plan has always been generously supported by home gardeners who have used its facilities to cheer thousands of hospital patients and nursing home shut-ins over the years.

Hospital officials like the plan, too, welcoming every chance to see happiness spread through their wards.

Daffodils will be collected from donors Friday morning and be immediately taken to the two hospitals.

Gardeners with more flowers than they need for their own homes are asked to phone the Colonist at 3-4111 before 2 p.m. Thursday.

Volunteer drivers again will be needed to collect flowers and bring them to a central collection point. Each driver will be given a short list of addresses where flowers will be available.

Drivers able to assist are requested to phone the Colonist by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE Whine List: A friend of mine doesn't like power saws. He asks me to snarl on his behalf at the people who (he says) make the day and night hideous with these infernal machines, in the Cadboro bay area.

I hesitated with some misgivings because it seemed to me that this column was on the way to becoming a sort of public grouch forum or battleground of opposing factions.

Would it be wise, I asked, to turn the noise and the anti-noise groups, or the supporters and enemies of the power saw, loose in this space?

The usual result of these brawls is that I am caught in a cross-fire of verbal missiles from both sides, and have to retreat from the field, bruised and bleeding from several new holes in the head.

However, a man who works for a newspaper has a duty to help legitimate grievances. Am I afraid of a little argument? Do I hesitate to speak out, just because I know that whatever I say, people on both sides are going to call me a liar and a fool?

You're darned right I'm afraid. You're darned right I hesitate.

"So I guess I won't use anything on the subject," I told my friend.

His voice became sharper as he outlined the ravages of the power saws on the suburban quiet of Cadboro bay, and the irreparable harm the noise was wreaking on the sanity of the residents.

Unless I did something to bring the matter to public notice, I might have a number of mental breakdowns and perhaps a murder on my conscience, he said.

"With the exception of Royal Oak, Forest Lawn and some other communities whose denizens are all underground," I said, "Victoria is probably the quietest city for its size in North America. And Cadboro bay is one of the quietest sections of Greater Victoria.

"So any noise probably seems offensive by contrast. Have you been annoyed lately by anyone breathing too heavily? Been bothered by the clatter of birds and muskrats building their nests?"

But my friend insisted that power saws were no joke. Several of them were buzzing and screaming in a new housing subdivision, and at least another one was making similar unpleasant noises from the beach, where people were sawing up firewood.

He wasn't the only person in the district who was angry about the power saws. Why was it necessary to use power saws to slice up a few sticks? The job could much better be done with ordinary axes and saws. Surely a person was entitled to peace and quiet in a residential district.

I agreed that power saws could make an offensive noise at times. So could cars, wives and children. Nobody suggested doing away with any of the last three articles by legal decree.

No, said my friend, but like all other good things, cars, wives, children and power saws should be regulated and kept in their respective places.

So we left it there. That will teach my friend to try to use my column for his private grievances.

Lake Ships Icebound Again

Sudden ice breakup on the St. Lawrence river immobilized these nine ocean-going vessels in Quebec harbor. The ships, most of them bound upriver for Montreal and Great Lakes ports, moored in Wolfe's cove until ice conditions improved.—(CP).

Attic Under Attack

Woodpecker 'Haunts' House

Somewhere in the cavernous attic of one of Victoria's bigger homes is a woodpecker, and the people there have asked the police to do something about it.

In turn, police have called in warden Bob Sinclair of the B.C. game department.

"That bird has been working on it for about two weeks," said Mrs. E. C. Powell, 402 Chester. "I can't tell you how awful its hammering is."

The Powells have managed to determine that the woodpecker has knocked a hole three inches wide through the peak of a gable, but "we can't reach it, it's so high up."

"Only the telephone people and people like that can go up there," said Mrs. Powell.

A recently-arrived tenant, authoress Mrs. Effie Richmond from California, thought the place was haunted at first.

Mrs. Powell wants the bird removed or "maybe they can put up one of those fire ladders and build a birdhouse over the hole."

Game warden Sinclair said last night: "Don't worry . . . I'll look after it."

To Keep Industry

Support Own Producers, Labor Urges Victorians

Victorians must support producers, including bakeries, if industry is to remain here, T. C. Gooderham, Trades and Labor Congress representative, declared after a provincial council meeting yesterday of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union of America (AFL-CIO).

Some bakeries selling in Victoria, he said, have found it advantageous to close their Victoria plants and ship goods over from Vancouver.

A resolution passed by the council, he said, demanded that bakeries take care of "long-time" employees affected by centralized production.

Locals have been asked to demand in their work agreements that workers with "more than two, three, four or five years' service" be provided with work in such centralized plants.

The council also voted to send a letter to the provincial department protesting the violation of "every labor code in the province' by non-organized bake shops.

Workers in these shops have low rates of pay and long hours with no overtime pay, said Jack Reid, vice-president of the 12th district of the union.

The union has proof of these violations, Mr. Reid said, and will follow up with a delegation if the letter does not remedy the situation.

New Seed Gift Kirkwell Aster

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

I'm letting you in on a little secret today—I don't actually do the packing and mailing of your free Colonist seeds with my own lily-white hands. I've got the boys and girls at the Colonist office doing most of the dirty work for me these days.

The first couple of times I offered to share some of my new seeds with my readers, we handled the whole thing at home. Every evening, after the supper dishes were cleared away, the whole family gathered around the dining-room table and set up a production line which Henry Ford would have envied. Even Brian, only five years old at the time, did yeoman service counting out seeds and putting them in their envelopes.

TOO BIG

The thing just got too big for us. After my wife blistered her tongue from licking 6,000 envelopes, the family went on strike and I had to look for help from the Colonist staff. Most of the load falls on the pretty shoulders of Ruby Atkinson, editorial secretary, and I'm going to be about as popular with her as a skunk at a picnic when she reads this, because I've got some more seeds for you!

They are flower seeds this time—a tiny dwarf plant called the Kirkwell aster—and just about the cutest thing you ever saw. They are as easy to grow as radishes, making a compact little plant standing about eight inches high, and covered all over with a profusion of double aster flowers in pink, rose, blue and crimson. Each flower is a perfect miniature of the ordinary big asters, but only the size of a 50-cent piece.

CHARM COLOR

I ran across the Kirkwell asters last summer when I was visiting a colleague on the Mainland, and was fascinated by the charm and color of the plants as they bloomed in his garden.

This was in August, and you could hardly see any foliage for the profusion of bloom. Then, after the big freeze and snow of November, my friend told me the little plants kept right on blooming, sticking up through the snow with their noses in 12-degree weather!

He swept the snow away, picked a bunch of the flowers, and sent them to me by mail, packed in an old shoe box. After suffering frost and snow, and three days in the mails, the blooms were looking a bit bedraggled when we unpacked them, but when we put them in water, they freshened up within an hour, and to our surprise, they lasted a full 10 days!

This must be some kind of a record for staying power, for in spite of their fragile appearance, the dainty blooms must be incredibly rugged.

DOZEN USES

The Kirkwell aster has a dozen different uses in the garden. It makes a most attractive and long-blooming edging for a bed of bigger plants; it is ideal for window boxes and hanging baskets; as a cut flower for low bowls and small vases, it lasts longer than any other annual I can think of, and because of its size and compact habit of growth, you can dig up a few specimens in the fall, pot them up, and use them as flowering house plants.

I am most anxious for all my gardening friends to try the Kirkwell aster this year, for I am sure you will lose your heart to it as readily as I did.

SMALL PINCH

Through considerable intrigue and wire-pulling, I have managed to scrounge enough of this rare seed to provide each of you with a small pinch, and all that remains is for you to fill out the coupon and send it to me, together with a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

I've used up all my space in raving about this grand little plant, so there isn't enough room for the coupon in today's paper, but you'll find it right under this column in Tuesday's Colonist. On Tuesday, also, I'll give you a few tips on how to grow these colorful dwarf asters.

The Car Corner

By J. T. Jones

'Chev' Returns to Solidity

The characteristics of a car that sells as many copies as Chevrolet say a good deal about what appeals to the mass of buyers. It seems to indicate some measure of return, in several important ways, to a more masculine kind of car.

This is not to say the '56 Chevrolet has gone fierce on us. It still has the living-room-on-wheels features of modern domestic models, and for the usual fees it comes with power options on just about everything but the ash-trays. But it has a firmness in the suspension and a solidity in the body structure that has been lacking on too many cars of late.

Accordingly, for a quick trip over a kinky road, I'd pick it over most of its competitors. A long haul over lumpy old pavement or washboard gravel might be something else again—other cars of the big three may make lighter of the jolts—but this is not an unmixed blessing. On good, open highway they all come out nearly even, as one might expect.

These matters all come under the heading of handling, which can be measured best with the tips of the fingers and the seat of the pants. It includes road feel, in which the steering wheel tells when the car wanders, long before the eyes detect it; steering accuracy, behavior on corners, presence or absence of brake "pull," and so forth.

The Chevrolet was noteworthy on all these points.

I keep mentioning such things because the majority of car buyers don't give the prospective purchase nearly enough of a workout before they sign the papers.

It's true some dealers discourage these tryouts, for reasons of economy, but a buyer who buys without trying is really cheating himself. And the worst scrimper in the business will soon change his tune if the customer insists.

This year's Chevrolets come in wide assortment—19 variations and heaven knows how many color combinations and trim choices. V-8 engines are running away with the show, although the faithful six is still with us.

Most popular Chevrolet combination here, according to Newell Morrison of Morrison Motors, is the Bel Air sedan, V-8 engine without power package, automatic transmission, no power assists on brakes or steering.

This adds up to a tidy package of old and new Chevrolet virtues.

It's a little-appreciated fact that the lowest-priced, biggest-selling car of any manufacturer is the one that gets the company's most careful attention in design.

It stands to reason. A 10 per cent drop in Cadillac sales, for instance, would cause General Motors some worry but not much financial distress. But if Chevrolet sales didn't keep up with the competition, the loss would be measured in millions.

Accordingly, the Chevrolet gets personal attention of the highest brass at GM—and the high brass there is very high brass indeed.

The advertising this year for Chevrolet follows the theme that the hot one's even hotter, and thi raises an interesting point.

The new models have more power, all right, but they didn't get it by making the engine bigger, as is almost invariably the case. They've improved the engine's breathing with extra carburetion—a four-throat carburetor on the most powerful of the V-8 line—and a high-lift camshaft. Hydraulic tappets are also new this year.

Smiling Red 'Twins' Approaching Britain

'Miracle' Cure

Recovery of his seven-year-old son, Paul, from an attack of meningeal pneumonia was a miracle, says Rev. Graham Lesser of the Church of the Apostle in Toronto. He said a doctor attending the case was amazed at the boy's recovery and agreed it was the result of the prayers of the family and not medical skill. Paul had taken ill on Easter Sunday.—(CPC)

LONDON (AP) — Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev rode toward Britain Saturday [illegible] major Western nation since the Bolshevik revolution.

The "Kremlin twins, B and K", as they have been called by the British press, were all smiles on leaving Moscow's green and white stuccoed station by special train Saturday.

At Kaliningrad — formerly the East Prussian city of Koenigsberg — they will board the Soviet cruiser Ordjonikidze Sunday. No foreign or Soviet newsmen will be permitted to see the embarkation.

Bulganin and Khrushchev seemed in good spirits as they were seen off by a party of dignitaries and diplomats amid a glare of television lights.

The Soviet leaders showed none of the animosity voiced in sections of the Russian press that "some forces" in the West were attempting to sabotage their trip.

There was one Russian suggestion that even the Prince Rainier-Grace Kelly wedding in Monaco had been timed to take the spotlight off the Russians' arrival in Portsmouth next Wednesday, the same day as the wedding.

Orders from No. 10 Downing street, the prime minister's residence, have gone out to safeguard Bulganin and Khrushchev at all costs. Peace between East and West may depend on it.

In Britain there are about 180,000 East European refugees who have lost families and friends behind the Iron Curtain and hate the Soviets.

Scotland Yard fears that one fanatic might hate enough to throw a bomb or pull a trigger.

LONDON (Reuters)—The Lord's Day Observance Society in a resolution passed Friday said it "profoundly regretted" that Queen Elizabeth will receive Russian Premier Bulganin and Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev on Sunday, April 22.

'Baghdad' Countries To Get Moral Aid

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United States, in an important move to stabilize the Middle East, will announce next week its decision to throw new support to the five-nation Baghdad defence pact strung along Russia's southern frontiers.

The [illegible] port will be announced formally in Tehran Monday by Deputy Undersecretary of State, Loy W. Henderson. He will voice the pledge at the opening meeting of the Baghdad Pact Council.

The Tehran meeting is designed to shore up the somewhat shaky foundations of the new defence organization and to expand the economic activities of the alliance.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Dag Hammarskjold arrived Saturday night from apparently encouraging talks with Egypt's leaders on the Middle East crisis.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seven persons were killed Saturday when their house was dynamited by raiders in Yareen village about a mile from the Israeli border, Lebanese security sources said.

Before leaving Egypt he said "I have done in Cairo what I came to do."

The UN secretary-general stopped off at the Gaza strip, focal point of Israeli-Egyptian friction, en route from Cairo to his temporary headquarters here. He also stopped briefly in Israel.

In five days in Egypt, Hammarskjold succeeded in getting pledges from both Israel and Egypt on a cease-fire. The pledges now appeared to be in the process of being carried out.

The two nations also agreed to avoid hostile acts.

Now he and his staff were expected to work out the details for a withdrawal of troops of both sides from the border, the setting up of a buffer zone and a 'limitation' on the border forces.

Traffic Ticket Battle Threatens

By WILLIAM MARSHALL
Colonist Correspondent

VANCOUVER—Strife is looming again between the Vancouver police traffic department and a 37-year-old Vancouver man who has been battling it off and on for the past three years.

Enraged anew at an announcement that motorists who ignore traffic offence tickets may be arrested and thrown in jail is Ralph Wolloschuk, 1504 Charles street.

Mr. Wolloschuk, who once appealed a traffic court conviction to the County Court, where it was promptly confirmed, threatens to carry this one to the Supreme Court.

He contends police have no legal right to arrest a man who ignores a traffic offence notice. By law he must be served a summons personally, he says.

His protest came after reports were published that 153 persons were arrested on bench warrants in March for failing to appear in traffic court.

TICKET IS SUMMONS

Traffic officials say no one has been arrested for ignoring parking violation tickets left on their cars. But a number have been arrested when bench warrants for ignoring tickets handed them by traffic officers for other traffic violations.

Wolloschuck, who says he has nothing against traffic police and is not griping about parking tickets — he calls them business expenses still thinks the whole business should be thrashed out in the higher courts.

Wolloschuk's protest came as Chief Constable George Archer announced that an all-time record of 12,576 traffic offence notices were handed out in March this year.

So far this year there have been 35,468 tickets issued, compared with 25,403 last year at the same date. Fines total $195,551, more than $40,000 more than comparable 1955 figures.

MORE DEATHS

Despite the increase in tickets, the accident record shows nine fatalities to the end of March this year compared to three at the same date last year, and property damage estimated at $664,000, compared to $442,000.

Staging in Vancouver of the biggest show ever presented of native arts of the Pacific Northwest has limelighted the change a few years has brought to the Indians.

A chief assistant in arranging displays is Gloria Cranmer, pretty Kwakiutl girl from Alert Bay, a third-year anthropology student at UBC.

An early photograph of an Indian wedding, taken when the native Indian culture was still more or less intact, was among the exhibits she handled. The bride in the picture is her grandmother.

APACHE VISITOR

Linking past and present also was the visit of Chief Silent Dawn, an Apache from the United States and a student of East Indian philosophy.

Conducting some of the tours of what is probably the greatest exhibition of its kind ever assembled is a well-known Vancouver radio personality, Bill Reid—who counts a Haida chief among his ancestors.

Nearly a year's hard work lies behind the Indian arts show.

Payoff so far for the people who labored to make the show a success came Saturday when 38 deaf-mute and two blind youngsters were taken on a conducted tour of the show.

Rules were relaxed so the blind children could handle some of the exhibits.

A high point for the deaf-mute students was the darkened mask room, where baby spotlights limned each mask.

The show is continuing to May 6, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday to Friday and 2 to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

A regrettable trend toward "rushing" the customer is working clerks to a nervous lather in some stores in Vancouver.

WANT ACTION

Obviously goaded into action by employers who want some bustle about the place, the over-eager salesmen and women start asking the customer what they can do for him almost as soon as he gets a foot in the door.

Personally I don't think the system will pay off in over-all sales. Maybe I'm a bigger coward than most, but my reaction when pressured this way is to get into a panic, forget what I came for and edge out of the store.

I prefer the system in Victoria, where I was once allowed to sleep for an hour in a chair in a department store without being bothered.

In Vancouver they'd call a cop or an inhalator. But at least in Victoria I bought something after my snooze.

Fish Vs. Power

Senator Assails Socreds, BCER

CLOVERDALE, B.C. (CP)— Sen. Tom Reid of New Westminster, B.C., said here Friday night a favorable settlement between Canada and the United States on the proposed Mica Creek dam in eastern British Columbia "can be expected in the next three months."

The senator, speaking to the Surrey District Liberal Association, said the project would develop 2,500,000 horsepower on the Columbia river.

He criticized Social Credit members of parliament for supporting a scheme by the Kaiser Aluminum Corporation to build a dam on the Arrow lakes, 80 miles north of the international border in southeastern B.C. The Mica creek site is 120 miles further north.

Sen. Reid condemned the B.C. Electric Co. for surveying the Fraser river for power sites. The company is "feeding the people the kind of propaganda they want and are making statements about fish which are not true."

He said the company is making an impossible claim that it has discovered a way of taking fingerlings over a dam. On previous occasions the senator has said that the life of salmon is shortened when they have to bypass power dams.

Governor Challenged

Negro Law Student Stirs Harvard Forum

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Bitter remarks directed at Governor Marvin Griffin of Georgia by a Negro student threw a Harvard Law School forum debate on segregation into an uproar Friday night.

The incident occurred during a discussion period following a debate between Griffin and Attorney-General Jacob K. Javits of New York state under the auspices of the Harvard school.

The student, who identified himself as Seyoum Harregot, an Ethiopian, said to Griffin:

"The United States information service and you tell us that you are a peaceful nation. After hearing your speech tonight I can find nothing to justify that.

"LITTLE TOO FAR"

"Do you think after listening to you, I should go back to my people and say that we should go along with your side . . . when down in your part (of the country) they call us 'Niggers'?"

Griffin said only: "I think you've gone a little too far."

The student then attempted to continue, but a rising murmur from the audience upset him and he left the auditorium as some 1,500 law school faculty members, students and their guests applauded or hissed.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Governor James Folsom yesterday signed into law an act giving parents in Alabama "freedom of choice" in sending their children to schools which are racially segregated or integrated.

This act is connected with a proposed constitutional amendment which will be voted on in a special state-wide election Aug. 28.

Navy League Officer Sees Cadets

Cmdr. (S.B.) D. C. Elliott, RCN, inspected 155 Sea Cadets, Navy League cadets and Wrenettes Friday night at Rainbow headquarters.

He was accompanied by Dennis Brown, chairman of the Victoria branch of the Navy League of Canada, and Area officer Lieut. Fred Freeman.

Cmdr. Elliott, director of Navy League cadets for the RCN, has been making inspections of Sea Cadets across Canada. His headquarters are at Hamilton.

He complimented the parade on its turn-out and told Navy League cadets and Wrenettes that new uniforms were on the way and should be in use within a month.

Island Businessmen Attend Day Course

Some 150 businessmen from several Vancouver Island centres attended a one-day course on "supervision, human relations and man management," given by Dr. Samuel Rosenstein of Marquette University, Milwaukee, in the Fox Theatre yesterday.

Audience included chartered accountants, purchasing agents, sales managers and others.

Largest delegation was a group of 19 from B.C. Forest Products, and persons from outside Victoria came from Jordan River, Duncan and Youbou.

Lectures were sponsored by the B.C. Safety Council and UBC extension department along with Victoria Chapter of the National Office Management Association. Chairman was D. A. Blakey of NOMA.

Dr. Rosenstein said acoustics of the theatre were "excellent; only the conservatory of the University of Toronto is as good."

Saanich Radial Road

MR. BRAHM WIESMAN'S proposal of a radial highway in Saanich, at approximately 3 miles from the centre of Victoria and traversing the peninsula from east to west at its widest part, is the most practical one we have heard. Reeve Arthur Ash, Saanich, has laid the proposal before the provincial department of public works; setting out the municipality's readiness to consider construction if it can get provincial help. Because such a road would need to be built to full traffic standards and would serve many purposes besides those of Saanich, it is probable that the suggestion will receive early attention.

As the director of the regional planning board has pointed out, there is no direct east and west link in the inner wards of Saanich, other than a criss-cross of small secondary thoroughfares which run in nearly every direction. A radial road would not only supply through connection from Arbutus Bay to Portage Inlet, where it would join the Island Highway, but also would serve to loop the north and south thoroughfares from the city into Saanich and the inner Saanich wards in the wide expanse of territory between the suggested terminals. This would be of inestimable value to Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt as well as to Saanich; and, as a civilian defence official has already remarked, another useful aid with the main egress from the whole region in the event of need.

While it is for the provincial government to say how the proposal may fit in with the Province's road program, on the face of it there would appear to be immediate returns from the construction of such an arterial link. Beyond Saanich's direct interest there is the clear need for radial connection in the whole region. This is virtually non-existent. The suggested McKenzie-Arbutus radial road would make an excellent start towards a remedy.

A Peculiar View

VICTORIA is not Vancouver or London, but that does not mean it has no traffic worries. The size of a city does not necessarily determine its density at a given point and the ratio of cars to population could well be greater in a small town than a large one. Any suggestion that no problem exists here is therefore belied by anyone with eyes to see.

One alderman, back from a trip to other places, says Victoria is a quiet little town with no real traffic or parking problems. Not for aldermen perhaps, but certainly for the ordinary motorist. There are times when some downtown streets are jammed to confusion and often a motorist can go round in circles looking for a parking place. Any alderman who does not recognize this is strangely blind. The situation may be worse in Chicago or Los Angeles, but that does not help matters here. Traffic in fact has been a consuming subject at the City Hall for years while little has been done about it.

Traffic will grow heavier also as the years pass. More and more cars are appearing on city streets here as elsewhere, as should be obvious to everyone. Even if there were no demand for some easement now, as there is, it is essential that planning should be done for the immediate future or this "quiet little town" will be brought practically to a traffic standstill.

The crucial aspect is not the employment of a consulting expert to survey the whole situation but the application of whatever may be his recommendations. It can be taken for granted that these may rub some interests the wrong way, and as has been pointed out civic courage will be required to carry through the needed remedies.

Flood Potential Apparent

THERE is unquestionable flood potential in British Columbia this spring. Report after report from the main watersheds has shown that greater than usual precipitation and less than ordinary run-off is the general condition in the principal drainage systems of the province. If May comes in warm, with cool nights or rain, the preliminary run-off may be effected without serious trouble at the peak, which follows early in June. But from every standpoint this will be a year for all districts affected by the thaw to watch their dikes and watercourses.

Last year the province was fortunate. There had been considerable snowfall through the winter, but when the thaw came a succession of hot days and cold nights eased the run-off. If that happens this year there may be no trouble. On the other hand it is a good deal to expect for two years in succession. Unusually heavy snows, relative absence of rain, with hard frosts through most of the winter have sealed in considerable water pressures in many of the drainage systems.

Vancouver Island is in much the same position in this respect as it was a year ago; with some improvement at points, but also with some fresh threats of spot flooding. Elsewhere in the province, particularly in the Kootenays and the Columbia drainage system, the weather in late May and early June will hold the only key there can be to a tense situation.

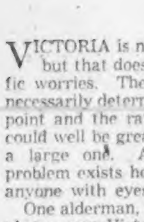
Monument to a Crusader

By SETH HALTON

ONE day last summer my wife and I sat in the back seat of a squat little Seabee as it spiralled lazily upwards in the narrow gorge between the 6,000-foot mountains at the southern end of Buttle Lake. When we finally got on top, where we could see the Strait of Georgia to the east or the broad Pacific to the west, the 65-year-old pilot relaxed.



He took a sack of Bull Durham from his pocket and shook some tobacco into a brown, wheat straw cigaret paper. When his smoke was going he pointed down to the jagged mountain tops, spotted here and there with splendid still-frozen little lakes sparkling like gems in the early morning sun.

Far below them Buttle itself, glittering blue, with the tall shoreline timber casting shadows far beyond the shoals, nestled secure and beautiful.

"This is the grandest country in the world," the pilot said, twisting in his seat. "Premier Bennett may call me the hard core of a pressure group, but he hasn't seen this."

The pilot was Will J. Reid, until his death last week the chairman of the board of Hancock Oil Company of Long Beach, California. He was better known internationally as a conservationist and locally as the leader of a crusade to save Buttle Lake from damming and its shoreline from logging.

Those who had the privilege of knowing Will Reid knew a kindly, white-thatched, rather weathered man; a philosopher, a fighter who wouldn't quit, a man devoted to his family and friends, a nature lover and a sportsman.

But in British Columbia, more often than not, he was abused.

Some years ago he bought a summer camp on Buttle lake. Because he could afford to, he flew in and out. Because he appreciated its rare beauty he fought the British Columbia Power Commission tooth and nail to prevent the lake being dammed or flooded and the shoreline from being logged. As a result critics enjoyed calling him "a millionaire American oilman trying to keep Buttle lake for himself and his rich friends."

How pathetically wrong they were! In his lifetime Will Reid established such a record of conservation of parks and wildlife, and such a reputation, that attacks by lesser men would have been ludicrous if the gullible had not believed them.

Perhaps he will be best remembered for his work in Ducks Unlimited, of which he has been president, chairman of the board, and a director of the Canadian section. Ducks Unlimited has been responsible for an increase of 300 per cent in the duck population since its inception 19 years ago, and has spent more than $4,000,000 on the Canadian prairies to restore water tables and extend reclaimed breeding grounds. Both Saskatchewan and Alberta awarded Mr. Reid rare lifetime hunting licences for his part in it.

He was an officer of the American Parks Association, which has fought with considerable success to preserve United State parks and increase them in size and numbers, and in Save the Redwoods League, a California organization which has succeeded to a large extent in doing just that.

He was associated with the Boy Scouts for 35 years and his expenditure of time and money—he was a generous spender for any worthy cause, conservationist or human—was largely responsible for the growth in Boy Scout strength in Long Beach from 400 to 10,000.

While he led the fight to preserve Buttle lake he was sometimes referred to as Mr. Buttle. "I'm proud to be named after that lake," he'd say. "And if I can do anything to save it, it will be small return for the wonderful summers I've had there."

Not long before his death Mr. Reid decided to use his considerable financial resources (You can't take it with you," he'd say) in an attempt to prevent the despoliation of any other parks in British Columbia by industry.

Now that he is dead the campaign may falter, but I hope not. It would be a monument to one of British Columbia's best friends, to the man who wanted to save Buttle lake not for himself but for the people.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

A NEWS PICTURE shows U.S. seamen being conveyed "up top" by means of one of three escalators built into the latest, giant-size American aircraft carrier. Moot cause, I suppose, for ribald comment from old tars.

It is the fashion of veterans to plume themselves on being tough old warriors, just because their service days were spartan and devoid of amenities that are common today. Actually they wouldn't want their sons to serve under the same harsh conditions.

Civilians of ripe age also affect to scorn modern conveniences as indicative that rising generations are soft, the while enjoying the same aids-to-ease.

The point about this is that environment counts and society must conform to its own era.

This column often enough has made fun of the North American leg, citing it as about ready to drop off because cars are the chief mode of locomotion nowadays.

But of course it won't drop off; not by a long chalk.

You might think an escalator on a warship was the ultimate in slothful ease for a fighting sailor but you'd be wrong. It will save his legs perhaps but it may also save his life.

And on a big modern carrier there are thousands of lives at stake.

This scribe had a faint taste a few years back of life on an aircraft carrier. That doesn't make him an expert on the subject by any means, but three weeks aboard helped to open his eyes. A carrier is a veritable factory, with a bewildering number of workshops and compartments down below. Sailors learn to know their way around a ship blindfold but even so most of the ways are horizontal.

Only here and there is the gangway perpendicular.

Now it's a tribute to deft naval feet and to blithe naval minds but nowhere else, I'm perfectly sure, is there a more awkward method of moving upwards than by a ship's ladder. Invariably it is so steep and narrow and filled with head hazards it's practically suicide, for a landsman in a hurry.

Sailors aboard ship have to hurry too, in peace else someone wants to know why not and in war lest they be skinned alive. An escalator, apart from being considerate on the muscles, could be an escape hatch beyond price.

It is not a symbol of decadent decline, therefore, but a highly efficient means of getting "topside" from below, as I understand U.S. sailors would phrase the action.

I daresay it will be some time before Canadian sailors enjoy the same advantage, however, unless an escalator is being built into the RCN's newest carrier the Bonaventure.

It seems to me to have been a serious weakness in ship design hitherto to have made it almost impossible for seamen to get on deck easily and quickly. In a warship the main idea has been to pack as much operational gear and equipment into the ship as possible, with scant regard for the mobility of those who man it. The ladders, almost, look like an afterthought.

And it should be important that men move as smoothly as the instruments they handle.

Canadian carriers are not of giant size but any one of them has a thousand and more men aboard and in an emergency it's not hard to imagine the confusion should hundreds of them seek the flight deck at the same time. Even one escalator would be invaluable.

In any case, if civilians can make ready use of escalators why not sailors. Actually the latter need them most.

Legacy of Napoleon

By BERNARD KAPLAN, North American Newspaper Alliance

PARIS—The French are earnestly debating whether to abolish a Napoleonic law that, for the past 150 years, has kept the nation's janitors from often getting a full night's sleep.

The law compels persons entering or leaving multiple dwellings to use a night bell controlled by the janitor. The system, uniform throughout France, has helped create the tightest police organization in Europe.

A bill is now before the Chamber of Deputies to do away with the ancient and unwieldly night bells. It has stirred wide discussion for, simple as it sounds, the change would represent a far-reaching reversal in the French way of doing things.

Janitors are up in arms over the issue. Logically, they might be expected to favor ending an arrangement which seldom permits them an uninterrupted night of rest. Actually, they adamantly oppose any change. They view it as an attempt to abolish their unique place in the French scheme of things and, incidentally, a good source of income.

Janitors have been the French police's main source of information since the days of Napoleon's chief gendarme, Joseph Fouche. Fouche, who was the first modern political policeman, created an apparatus of informers and counter-informers that French authorities have retained almost unchanged to this day.

The French police, very polite, even friendly under ordinary circumstances, seldom miss a trick. They boast that fewer crimes go unsolved here than in any other country.

To accomplish this, they keep minutely close tabs on even the most routine activities of everybody in the country. Everyone in France has a dossier and it is crammed full.

A middle-aged American came here to live a few years ago, his first trip to France since a brief visit he made with his parents when he was 13. Recently, he accidentally learned that his police dossier included very complete information dating from that childhood visit nearly 40 years ago.

Janitors, often women, are expected to co-operate with the police as a part of their job. In return, the police discreetly pad their income according to the value of the information received. Loss of control over the night bell would reduce their value to the authorities.

Few Frenchmen complained about the police system under which they had so long lived—until the German occupation. The presence of the Gestapo altered many attitudes. Frenchmen who spent years in concentration camps or hiding out became finicky about their right to privacy after the war.

It is this spirit which is behind the bill pending before the Chamber of Deputies.

Mixed-Up on the Maps

(From Saturday Night)

IN THE GREAT debate over the significance of the anti-Stalin line laid down by the Kremlin, Pravda's brief report about a change in the name of a factory didn't get much attention. But map-makers in the West groaned when they heard that the Stalin Auto Works was now to be called the Moscow Auto Works.

If this was the shape of things to come, the cartographers could look forward to wholesale changes in the names on their maps of Western Europe and Siberia. There are sixty-two Stalinsks, seven Stalinos, several Stalin Peaks, Stalinogorsks, Stalinirs, besides Stalingrad, Stalinbad and various other combinations derived from that now-hated name. Possibly an approach could be made to the Russians through the UN to get them to substitute something a little more enduring than a proper name for their communities, power plants and so on.

The wily Soviets, of course, may be doing all this changing simply to spread confusion through capitalistic classrooms. Cartographers of the world unite!

Exit Alfonso

THE last of the reigning Bourbons quit his throne 25 years ago today. King Alfonso XIII of Spain fled from Madrid to Cartegena and boarded a Spanish warship, which carried him to France. It was a bloodless revolution.

With the king were the Infante Alfonso, heir to the throne, and the Duke of Miranda. Queen Victoria was to follow shortly. The centuries-old monarchy of Spain, once the most powerful in the world, was finished.

But the king said confidently: "Goodbye until we return."

Niceto Ancala Zamora, just out of jail, became provisional leader of a new republic.

Montreal Canadiens beat Chicago Black Hawks, 2-0 in the deciding game and won the Stanley Cup. The city hall at Ottawa had been gutted by a $100,000 fire. Prime Minister R. B. Bennett's 1931-32 estimates provided for a $37,000,000 cut in Canada's spending from the previous year.

Representatives of the nine provinces approved the Statute of Westminster, which confirmed the standing of the Dominions as independent self-governing nations. The measure still had to go before the Dominion government.

Victoria city council set the tax rate at 42 mills, one and one half mills above 1930. Unemployment was severe.

The Dominion and the province together had provided $50,000 for relief work in Victoria, and comparable sums elswhere.

VICTORIA was a booming industrial centre, 50 years ago.

A "One Hundred Thousand Club" was launched on April 10, 1906 at a meeting presided over by Mayor Morley. George Carter said that as Canadians everyone should be proud of the growth of Vancouver, "but he hoped that for Victoria that it would celebrate the completion of a 100,000 population first."

"He pointed out the numerous industries already established: Soap works, paint works, rice mills, spice mills, great shipbuilding yards, lumber works, biscuit factories, chemical works, rolling mills, stove factory, cigar factories, sealing industry and the salmon canning industries . . ."

Reports from North Yakima, Washington, said that Mount Rainier had become active again as a volcano. "The mountain has been emitting fire and cinders for three days," said an account by a prospector who had been driven away from Mount Rainer by a shower of ashes.

Once an active volcano, Rainer had been reported in weak eruption in 1860, 1858 and 1843. The main crater is now dormant, but there are small smoking craters and hot springs.

THE Victoria-Esquimalt road was a sea of mud, 95 years ago. "Several of the wagons, while conveying passengers and freight from the steamer, became sloughed, and the passengers were forced to 'foot it' to town. One of the wagons remained on the road yesterday as a monument to the neglect . . . of our government."

"Several Chinese fishermen have been engaged . . . in drawing a large seine through James Bay, for the purpose of catching fish. The yield is enormous. The fish are small, however, and mostly of the species known as tom-cod, salmon-trout and smelt. These fish are dried and salted at Rock bay, and afterwards are packed for Celestial consumption at the mines."

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

A FEW hours' drive across the United States border makes it clear to Canadians why our neighbors find such pleasure touring in Canada. It's the highway signs.

What a fatigue it is to drive in any of the populous areas of most of the states. Every few hundred yards, a roadside sign. Every sign a change of pace. In a 10-mile drive, you see speed limits indicated as follows: 65, 50, 40, 35, 30, 25 and 20. Many of these speed signs are the same size as the shields employed to indicate the route number. Not for a moment can you take your mind off the mere business of driving in order to view the scene. You have to fix your mind on the mechanics not of driving but of proceeding. After a few hundred miles, you begin to feel a curious sense of enslavement. You are no longer free. You are part of a mechanism. Automation has taken you over. Like a unit in straight line mass production, you sit at the wheel with your eyes slightly skewed to the right, waiting your next instruction.

In Canada, we sometimes get the idea, during the tourist season, that our American visitors are rather carefree if not reckless drivers. The truth probably is that they are merely revelling in the sense of freedom they experience in provinces where speed signs are at a minimum, and largely confined to the normal speed on highways and the standard speed on entering towns, which are pretty uniform all across the country. Indeed, many a small community on highways contents itself with one speed notice on the outskirts, with perhaps a pleasant "Drive Carefully." In similar wide places in the road on most United States highways, there will be 10 to 50 speed notices between entry and departure. The impression grows that Americans rather like giving instructions. And taking them.

For they do take them. With very rare exceptions, American drivers obey these multifarious signs punctiliously. They drop from 65 to 20 miles an hour, in order to pass through some little strung-out cluster of a village, without apparent rancour or importance. The average driver is far more courteous than the average Canadian. They are polite and receptive to one another as bolts and nuts are in a well-designed production plant. They are far advanced in amenability to the machine.

Square Peg, Round Hole

SUCH strictures as ours carry only infinitesimal weight, but we cannot still the urge nonetheless to point out to selective service authorities in the United States a waste of manpower about to occur.

The number of men on the strength of the U.S. Navy escapes us momentarily, but it is large enough so that one man more or less is of no consequence. The number of men on the Brooklyn Dodgers who can win a World Series more or less single-handed like pitcher Johnny Podres is limited.

Podres could learn to pull an oar with the rest of them, but he can throw a baseball with the best of them. Why, after all, pursue ideas of equality to the painful extreme? Isn't baseball part of the way of life the draft is supposed in the end to support?

Put Podres in bell-bottom pants, and what does the navy gain? Someone who could win the next war? That, gentlemen, is what Brooklyn is losing.

Cougar Fans Lose Interest

In Wednesday's Colonist the sport page listed a number of reasons why the Victoria Cougars hockey team had such a low attendance this past season.

As a Cougar fan, may I say that in my opinion the principal reason in poor fan support was not mentioned. The great change-over in personnel from season to season is the chief reason why hundreds of fans lose interest in the team. Nobody objects to a Cougar going to the National Hockey League, but I ask how many players of the past five Cougar teams are in the NHL? I can think of one. There may be two or three.

The great majority of former players of recent years who created a lot of fan interest here are either playing their hockey in the east or with other western teams, and in Thursday's issue of the Colonist it is said that a young Cougar star, Dobbyn, will likely play for Vancouver next season.

Herein lies the biggest reason for lack of local interest in the Cougars and failing fan support. Let's not be so naive as to blame television for everything in this respect!

The Will To Live

Your paper has had the courage, from time to time, to launch crusades in the public interest. What a wonderful service you would be doing if you now would pioneer a crusade to disassociate the word "incurable" from the word "cancer."

After all, what does "incurable" mean, anyway? The doctors will say, "no known cure to medical science." They will not preclude the efficacy of the human body to recover on its own. They will not — they can not — deny the factors of faith, hope and the will-to-live as fundamental elements in the recovery of any patient, regardless of the malady.

George Crile, Jr., MD, a prominent surgeon in Cleveland, Ohio, in his recently published book, "Cancer and Common Sense," states: "Those responsible for telling the public about cancer have chosen to use the weapon of fear. . . . They have bred in a sensitive public a fear that is approaching hysteria. They have created a new disease, cancer phobia, a contagious disease that spreads from mouth to ear." This is a book worth reading.

"Incurable"? To the medical profession, perhaps. To the patient? That is something entirely different. If publicity of the wrong type promotes fear, and fear promotes disease, then anyone who uses the word "incurable" is committing an offence against his neighbor.

Let's hear less about cancer cures and "quacks," and more about the cancer cured, and the power of love and hope to heal the afflicted. Never has a crusade of the press been more vital than this one.

Swarm of Specialists

With the advent of science a swarm of specialists has settled upon the study of health and nutrition learning more and more about ever smaller segments of knowledge. A great deal is found out about each disease and a huge, unmanageable body of knowledge is accumulated, and this and that disease is checked or overcome.

But our wholeness has not been restored to us. On the contrary, it is broken into a greater number of diseases and still more ailments, with a multiplicity of methods, officially blessed and otherwise.

All of this specialization would be quite useless to the Hunja people of India, who for long, following a diet adapted to promote optimum development, have never had a single disease known to man.

Scient states one of these days the true cause of cancer will be known. Are the scientists not too busy specializing to recognize it as a deficiency disease?

The great, renowned pathologist, Dr. Rhoads of the Sloan-Kettering Clinic said: "I can not approve the Hoxsey method, neither can I condemn it. I do not know what is in it."

With this type of humility the American Medical Association can possibly save itself from a second "Sister Kenny" debacle.

As yet, no acceptance of Hoxsey's large cash award to the AMA to come to Dallas and prove him a charlatan, for which he willingly will close his doors if they so prove.

For Better Milk

For the first time in my life I find myself obliged to buy store milk and am astounded at the sorry stuff obtained.

I understand there is a law about to be passed for compulsory pasteurization and would like to register a most emphatic protest. Milk is one of Nature's protective foods; and instead of sterilizing dirty milk, the answer should be to make sure of cleanliness at source.

But what I most object to is the tampering with the cream content, which most certainly should reach the consumer in the state the cow gave it. If children were fed decent whole milk there would be no need for tampering with our water supply to preserve their teeth.

I have lived most of my life on a farm, raised a healthy family and trained at one of London's children's hospitals, and am not a newcomer to this country.

The Remedy Is Simple

The remedy for a quick easement of the distress that is being endured by so many of Canada's elderly citizens is so very, very simple that it could be hard for it to penetrate the complex minds of the hierarchy, but it is too utterly absurd an idea that the matter should be left for political expediency at the next election.

It is perfectly patent that all those elderly citizens who are unable to pay an income tax can not afford to live; they are merely existing in this great country of Canada which is boosted by its politicians, and those who have, as a country with the highest standard of living in the world — but which world?

The cut-off to those who do not need the pension could treble the amount to those who now merely gather the crumbs beneath the federal table.

Loss to Cathedral

During the past two years Christ Church Cathedral has suffered severe loss in the passing of three prominent members of its congregation. I refer to the late Capt. Ord, Mr. A. Melhish and Mr. Walter Miles.

Capt. Ord gave good service both as a chorister and lay reader. Mr. Melhish in his capacity of sexton performed his duties in a conscientious manner. Mr. Miles had an almost lifelong connection with the cathedral and his service can not be over-rated.

I hope that some lasting memorial to these three gentlement will be placed in the cathedral.

Grateful to Victorians

I am hoping through the kindness and courtesy of The Daily Colonist to express to the dear people of Victoria my gratitude for the sympathy shown me in the recent unfortunate incident that I experienced. Also to thank them for the kind letters, lovely flowers and generous gifts so totally unexpected.

God was good when he led me to Victoria, and though I have not a single relative here or on the island, I have found in the Central Baptist church dear friends whose loving kindness has exceeded anything that I have had from my own people for many years, and I have a deep and sincere affection for them all. It is good to live and die among such people.

Gratefully and sincerely your fellow citizen,

Alternate Holidays

About this matter of stores closing. I am surprised that another alternative has not been suggested long ago. That is that half the stores close on one whole or half day and the other half on another. I believe Wednesdays and Thursdays would be the fairest days as most equal for business.

It is vital that some shops should be open always for tourists, as well as for the added convenience for the general public. That plan has worked satisfactorily in London, Ontario, for some years and in Britain for well over 50 years. I think the customers on whom the stores depend should be considered.

How Well Informed?

The British Columbia Social Credit League again is using the two slogans "Be Clearly Informed" and "Social Credit Keeps You Informed."

Surely some of the Socreds must blush with shame when they see these slogans repeated and think of the Socred Government's refusal and silence re the Sommers-Sturdy case and the Cassiar road fiasco.

Will the government keep us fully informed as to where all the thousands of dollars spent on elections, propaganda, etc., came from?

What has happened to all the self-righteous statements made by the Socreds during elections — no campaign funds, no patronage, no party, etc.?

Probably most of the Socreds themselves don't know the answers.

Stars Trade Blows

NEW YORK (BUP)—Leading man Hugh Marlowe said Saturday he would appeal to Actors' Equity Association his dismissal from the cast of "Anniversary Waltz" after he traded slaps with a leading lady who accused him of kissing her too ardently.

The handsome Hollywood and Broadway actor was barred from the Alcazar theatre when he showed up for Friday night's performance of the marital comedy. He was informed that he had been dismissed, his role taken by Andrew Duggan.

ALL AGREED

Marlowe's exit came Thursday night as the curtain ran down on the end of act II. Everybody agreed that his leading lady, Marjorie Lord slapped him and he replied in kind.

"She swats me on the side of the face," Marlowe said. "She did it emotionally. So I slapped her right back in the heat of emotion.

Redistribution of Ridings May Be Studied by House

OTTAWA — The House of Commons privileges and elections committee will shortly commence a preliminary study of whether there should be any change in the method of parliamentary redistribution of the nation's 265 constituencies.

Leading members of the privileges and elections committee said last night the possibility of a new method of redistribution after the next decennial census in 1961 will be considered.

A Montreal lawyer, Leon Lalonde, has been retained by Secretary of State Roch Pinard to prepare for the committee a survey of parliamentary redistribution methods followed in other countries of the Commonwealth. This report will bring up to date a report prepared back about 1938 by the late Harry Butcher, a Manitoba lawyer who had sat in the Commons as a Liberal MP.

Since Confederation, parliament has handled redistributions following each earlier decennial census. A special Commons committee, with representatives from all parties, has done the work. Efforts have been made to lessen the population gap as between urban and rural constituencies.

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

A professor complains that young people entering university are becoming less and less able to work. Youth used to be brought up on Kipling's exhortation to "fill the unforgiving minute with 60 seconds' worth of distance run." Times have changed. Nevertheless this fundamental law applies: nothing without hard work.

Paul begs the Ephesians to "redeem the time" "Use your time well." He exhorts the youthful Timothy to be "a workman that needeth not be ashamed." He repeatedly urges the Thessalonians to be hard workers. He commands Romans not to be "slothful in business."

Jesus considered laziness one of the very worst sins. He condemns the fellow who does not use his talent and the lazy girls who were not ready for the wedding party.

A Scottish minister, preaching on the Crown of Thorns, exclaimed, "I wonder in what sluggard's garden they grew! Indeed an abnormal desire for sleep is usually considered a pathological symptom. So perhaps the contemporary hatred of work is symptomatic of the disorder in the spirit of man.

Great achievement demands drudgery even more than genius. Edison once said that genius was "10 per cent inspiration and 90 per cent perspiration." Thus H. W. Schwartz claims that the secret of a Cremona violin did not consist in magic, but just plain, careful, hard work. Happy is the youth who learns to work.

Basis for Good Life

But we must remember Isaiah's basis for a good life: "He that believeth shall not make haste." This constitutes no contradiction to the demand for work. He that believeth shall not delay either. Unless we play we shall rush about in a state of confusion, making mistakes, developing irritations, and hurrying for a breakdown. Nor is the work we do good under those conditions. As Chaucer said,

"There is na workman
That can be both worken well and hastilie.
This must be done at leisure, parfaitlie."

This writer once watched some carpenters build a considerable construction, only to have to tear it down. Let us make sure where we are going. A man dashed from the train to a taxi. "Let's get going fast," he urged. After some time of frenzied driving he asked, "Aren't we nearly there?" The driver replied, "You didn't tell me where you wanted to go."

Men and women today are destroyed by the motto, "Keep busy!" That sort of frantic activity has little relation to creative work. Too many are involved in the competition to be "the richest man in the graveyard." Like machinery, all of us have "a fatigue limit." Relax or burst.

Relaxation does not mean the neurotic round of parties and receptions that fray the nerves of both women and men. Let us have more meditation. We require creative leisure. Prayer is essential. We live too much under the dominion of din.

Tiredness Healthy

Work must be severe. Tiredness is healthy. We should sometimes be exhausted. We want to stretch life. The Scots proverb is a good one, "He that tholes overcomes." But let us remember that a crop of wheat owns only five per cent of the farmer's energy. The remaining 95 per cent comes from the universe. Keep in mind that man does not create energy; he transmits energy. Don't try to do God's work.

Could we end this Christian essay with a Sanskrit poem?

"Listen to the Exhortation of Dawn!
Look to this Day!
For it is Life, the Very Life of Life.
In its brief course lie all the Varieties and Realities of Your Existence.
The Bliss of Growth,
The Glory of Action,
The Splendour of Beauty.
For Yesterday is but a Dream.
And Tomorrow is only a Vision.
But today well lived makes
Every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness
And every Tomorrow a vision of Hope.
Look well therefore to this Day!
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn."

$1,000,000 Training School To Be Built at Yellowknife

EDMONTON (BUP) Jean Lesage, minister of northern affairs and national resources, said in Edmonton Saturday that construction of a $1,000,000 vocational training school at Yellowknife, was one of the main projects in an additional expansion program for the northwest territories this year.

Lesage arrived Friday night from the far north where he was a member of a party of Canadian and United States cabinet members who inspected the DEW radar line.

The minister said the government intended to open schools at several points for Indians, Eskimos and Whites. These new schools will be built at Yellowknife, Fort Smith, McPherson and the new Aklavik. Tenders will be called soon for the vocational training school which will have 100 students. Later it was planned to have similar schools at Frobisher bay and Aklavik.

The reduction in the number of northern Caribou has been causing some concern, said Lesage. A survey last summer showed a serious decrease since the last count was made in 1948.

In view of this, the northwest territories council has decided on certain conservation measures. One of these measures, planned for this year, was to have biologists make studies of the health of the animals while another step was to increase predator control, he said.

Whipping No Good 'Study Group Finds

OTTAWA (CP)—Abolition of corporal punishment in Canada as part of a sentence and as a control measure in prisons likely will be recommended to the government this session by a special Commons-Senate committee.

A well-informed source says the committee, which has been studying capital and corporal punishment and lotteries for the last two sessions, appears to be almost unanimous that the strap and lash belong to the Middle Ages.

However, he says committee members are divided on whether capital punishment should be retained or abolished. Varying opinions also are held by members on whether existing lottery laws should be amended.

Both the Commons and the Senate have approved re-establishment of the committee this session to write a report. It likely will hold its first meeting April 26 and is expected to submit a report in June.

OF NO VALUE

During the last two sessions, the committee took some 1,600 pages of evidence on the three issues. However, no further public hearings are planned this session.

The source says he expects the committee will urge complete abolition of corporal punishment. The committee appears to be satisfied that corporal punishment is of no value as a deterrent to crime or as a disciplinarian measure in prisons.

He says that if the committee does not recommend capital punishment be abolished, it probably will urge that hanging be replaced by another method of execution. The most likely alternative would be electrocution.

The CCF party is the only Commons group which has placed itself on record in favor of abolition. Other opposition parties have taken no formal stand although it is known that many of their members are opposed to execution for murder.

GOVERNMENT SILENT

The last official government statement was made in 1950 by the then solicitor - general, Hon. Hughes Lapointe, when he opposed a private member's bill to abolish the death penalty. However, many Liberals likely would favor life imprisonment in place of death if the government permitted a free Commons vote.

Justice Minister Garson said in February that it would be appropriate for the government to consider a free vote only after the Senate - Commons committee makes its report.

The source described the lotteries issue as sticky. He indicated that if the committee makes any recommendations for relaxation of existing laws they will be of a minor nature.

It's Quite Legal

Save on Your Income Tax

Would you like to know how to save yourself over $1,500 on income tax on a $10,000 income? Read on: it can be done, legally and honestly.

Most people have now completed their income returns for the year—if they haven't they may be liable to penalties and this is perhaps a good time to reflect how their burden of payment can be reduced for next April.

To those whose money is chiefly in wages or salaries, and is thus taxed at the source — not a great deal can be done, but those with investment income can make alterations that greatly affect the income tax situation.

As a means of inducing investment in Canadian development the government has made considerable concessions to those who hold equity shares — either common, preferred, "A" or "B"—in Canadian companies.

Major Point For Investors

Dividends from such sources are subject to a 20 per cent tax credit, which for a person depending largely upon investment income can be a very important matter.

In this respect it should be carefully noted that a number of companies, although their operations are largely in Canada, may have U.S. registrations which make their dividends ineligible for this 20 per cent credit. Your broker will quickly tell you how you stand in case of doubt.

It should also be understood that the 20 per cent tax credit does not apply to bonds, debentures or mortgages

This may, or may not make sense, but the fact remains that the holder of B.C. Electric 4% per cent cumulative preferred stock get the tax credit while holders of B.C. Electric 4% per cent bonds do not.

Yet the bond at present prices yields only $4.37 for every $100 invested while the preferred stock yields $4.60 per $100.

Final Yield Shows Rise

If the shareholder is liable to tax on the whole of his investment income, he will find that his final yield on the preferred has increased by over one per cent, and will be the equivalent of nearly 6 per cent return on a bond.

I have singled out B.C. Electric as an example, but there are many similar comparisons throughout the lists of bonds and preferred stocks.

However B.C. Electric is a good example for its preferred stock always enjoys a good market, and its dividend paying performance makes it among the best of the blue chips. In its quality as an investment it would not rank too far behind the company's bond with the same coupon rate.

The investor must wonder if the big difference in yield is worth the extra security of the bond.

Under the 1956 taxation rates, a married person without dependents need pay no tax on an income of $5,000 if all his income is derived from stock dividends. If half of his income is earned and half in stocks he will pay $65 tax a year but if his income is all from bonds, mortgages or bank interest he will have to pay $460 tax.

Similar figures for a man with $10,000 income would be complete freedom from tax for income totally subject to the dividend tax credit of 20 per cent; over $600 tax if he earned half of his income and received the rest from stock dividends, and over $1,600 if his money all came from bonds etc.

The Canadian government gives an additional incentive to the investor who is willing to place his money into more exploratory channels.

Holders of mine and oil stocks may also take advantage in many cases of a 20 per cent depletion allowance, which reduces the taxable part of the dividend to 80 per cent.

This depletion allowance varies with various companies, and again the investor should check with the broker as to which dividends are eligible for this benefit.

Oil Companies Take Options

Okalta Oils, High Crest Oils and Canadian Homestead Oils have exercised their option to purchase properties of Crystal Oils Ltd. in the Leduc-Woodbend field of Alberta, and the Steelman, Alida, Frobisher, Nottingham and Hastings areas of Saskatchewan.

The deal comprises 451,000 acres of which Okalta holds 50 per cent interest and Highcrest and Canadian Homestead 25 per cent each.

Net profit of Supertest Petroleums in 1955 was $1,584,938 (1.81 a share), against $1,674,666 (1.98 a share) in 1954. Despite the drop, W. L. Barager, president, noted an increase in sales although competition was keener through construction of a large number of service stations by rival companies.

Supertest is continuing research in case the company should consider entering the refining business, and an increase in the authorized share capital was a step to give capital flexibility to meet this eventuality.

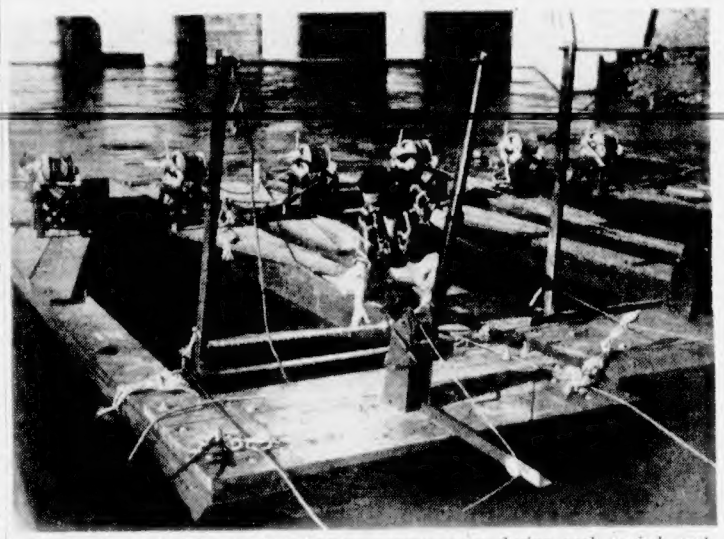
Nets Before Penstock

Fish Lives Stake in Puntledge Battle

Save Salmon from Turbines

BY ALEC MERRIMAN

Fisheries and B.C. Power Commission officials are waging a desperate round-the-clock battle to protect downstream migrant salmon, steelhead and trout on the Puntledge river near Courtenay.



Jim Scott, provincial game department field technician, checks nets which are now catching 500 spring salmon fry a night on Puntledge river and will catch many more during peak period next month. — (Colonist photo by Alec Merriman)

Three Fyke nets have been anchored in the forebay leading to [illegible] three are being built by the power commission so the whole entrance may be covered by nets.

The operation is in charge of federal district biologist Ted Burridge, who reports the three nets are now catching about 500 spring salmon fry each night. The peak will be reached the latter part of May and it is hoped to have the other three nets installed by then, he said.

They are now catching spring salmon fry and later on they expect to get steelhead and cutthroat fry and yearlings and spring salmon yearlings.

Netting started in March and will continue into August.

Mr. Burridge estimates that if the fry were allowed to enter the penstock, 34 per cent of the 500 caught each night would either be killed in the 350-foot drop or at the BCPC generating turbines at the power house.

HEAVY SALMON

The fry being saved now are the heavyweight spring salmon that sport and commercial fishermen will catch in the Comox bay area four or five years from now.

The rafts are made of 22-foot pontoons with a net suspended between them and a live box on the downstream end of the raft. The fry are released by flume below the power commission dam.

Mr. Burridge emphasized the [illegible] to build a fish fence below the [illegible] to the conservation of downstream migrants.

"This is strictly temporary. The Fisheries Research Board of Canada scientists at Departure bay are seeking to find a final solution," he said.

Under consideration is a moving screen in front of the entrance to the penstock and a system of suspended chains which would detract the fish to another direction.

But the downstream migrant problem is only one phase of concern for fisheries officials brought about by the power commission's Puntledge river development.

Another is the problem of getting spawners upstream. It is estimated that last year, out of an average 3,000 salmon which spawn annually in the Puntledge, only 800 survived to spawn.

MANY KILLED

Many of the adult fish were killed or injured at the tailrace (outlet of the turbines) of the BCPC 35,000-horsepower generating plant, but the full loss may not be attributable to the power project.

One plan being considered is [illegible] fish into traps. Then they would be hauled in specially-designed tank trucks and released in the spawning grounds. This system is in use at the Cleveland dam on the Capilano river.

Rush 'Paper Lift' Feeds U.S. Presses

CAMPBELL RIVER—Canadian newsprint is crossing the border into the United States by truck for the first time from the Elk Falls plant, in a rush "paper lift" to the San Francisco Examiner and Los Angeles papers.

First of 42 trucks left here yesterday to begin delivery of 700 tons of newsprint to the papers, which found themselves critically short of stock and put in an emergency order. No boat was available in time for shipment, which must be completed by Wednesday, so the highway transport was arranged, pulp mill manager T. B. Hargreaves said.

A breakdown of a paper boat, which had to remain in Vancouver, caused the short supply.

A chartered boat, the Charles E. Dent, was being loaded yesterday with rolls of newsprint for Long Beach, California.

LADYSMITH—The provincial public works department will supply the pipe and make the excavation to repair a broken sewer line, ending a dispute with the city over responsibility for it, city clerk R. S. Wood has reported.

City will do the installing and the back-fill for the $2,000 job which involves some 300 feet of pipe between Roberts street and Baden Powell street on Esplanade, the new Trans-Canada highway route.

The government did not accept responsibility for the sewer break noted after government highway crews widened the Esplanade, but after a considerable exchange of correspondence offered the pipe and excavation work. It was not known when the pipe would arrive.

Gasoline Fire Quelled

CHEMAINUS—A 15-ton Shell gasoline truck gave a "puff" near here Thursday and burst into flames, but the volunteer fire department kept them from setting off its highly explosive load.

Subdriver Bill Attwater, of Nanaimo, was delivering 2,000 gallons of gasoline to Chemainus when his truck gave a "puff" and flames poured from under the hood on the old Chemainus highway near Saltair. The hastily-summoned fire department confined the blaze to the motor and cab, both of which were wrecked. The blaze was believed to have started by gas falling on the hot manifold.

Logging in Spawning Areas Blamed for Loss of Salmon

NANAIMO—Logging operations on Vancouver Island were blamed for the depletion of Coho salmon by Ted Barshy at a Nanaimo and District Fish and Game Protective Association meeting here Friday.

Mr. Barshy told members that fishermen were always blamed for the decrease of salmon.

"The fisheries department can come out with all its reports, but we know what is wrong," he said. President of the Vancouver Island Affiliated Fish and Game Clubs, Mr. Barshy said the main reason for depletion was logging in the spawning areas.

Discussion on the salmon question arose when a notice of motion from the Cowichan Bay Salmon Club was presented, calling for a Royal commission to investigate the depletion of Coho in the waters of Canada's west coast.

A notice of motion from the Victoria Fish and Game Club, requesting a spring season on blue grouse, was favored by the meeting.

Biologist Don Robinson reported that hunters can expect a good deer season this year. The past winter has been severe in some areas for deer, especially in the South Fork region, but at Northwest Bay the deer had fared well. He thought the 1956 season would be comparable to 1954.

A second brant count will be held in the Nanaimo-Courtenay area April 22. A count in March found 19,900 of the birds in the area.

'Unity for Progress' Theme for Future

Shrine Will Mark Hatchet's Grave

A monument will mark the spot where—with full ceremony including Indian dances, peace-pipe smoking and a luncheon—Vancouver Island leaders bury the hatchet on April 25.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, chairman of the arrangements committee for the hatchet-burial, said yesterday that a stone had been ordered bearing the words, "Hatchet Buried April 25, 1956, Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo, Symbolizing Vancouver Island's unity for progress."

TRADE WELFARE

The proceedings, designed to bring all Vancouver Island communities together to work in accord for the greater trade welfare of the whole Island, will begin with a luncheon at 12.30 p.m. in the Emerald room of the Tzouhalem Hotel at Duncan. The hatchet-burying ceremony will follow at 2.30 p.m. outside the Duncan Chamber of Commerce on the Island highway.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black and Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Chetwynd are being invited to attend the no-host luncheon, along with presidents and managing secretaries of all Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island and Salt Spring Island, all federal and provincial legislators from Island constituencies, and all mayors, reeves and chairmen of boards of village commissioners of the Island.

Reeve C. A. Murison of North Cowichan will be luncheon chairman, and Mayor Jack Dobson of Duncan chairman of the hatchet-burial ceremonies.

The all-Island meeting has grown from an agreement to "bury the hatchet" made some weeks ago by Mayor Earle Westwood of Nanaimo and Mayor Percy Scurrah of Victoria.

Hollywood's Lone Wolf

Tracy Pooh-Poohs Aura of Mystery

Solitude Essential To Think Out Roles

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—"People call me a male Garbo," smiled Spencer Tracy. "As an actor, of course, I'm flattered at the comparison. I'm told I'm a mysterious guy. I don't agree. I'm not inaccessible. Every Hollywood correspondent knows me by my first name and we've had many chats on the set. Nor do I enjoy being alone. I'm really a gregarious fellow. Honestly, I am."

Unlike Garbo, Tracy doesn't clear the set when he emotes. Young Bob Wagner says working with him in "The Mountain" last year was worth more than a full course at drama school. Bob once asked Tracy the key to good acting.

"You must believe every word you speak," replied Tracy.

Tracy's friends don't talk about him, and what he says about himself is commonplace.

"I've been called a lone wolf," he says. "Well, I've a job to do—acting—and you don't get the job done by talking about yourself. You must think things out. I do it best alone.

"In France on days I didn't work in 'The Mountain,' I'd rent a car and drive to Geneva or the Swiss border. I took long walks.

"I spent two weeks getting used to the altitudes before we started to shoot. I climed some pretty high peaks. I had to know how it feels to be a mountain climber. I had to understand what makes a man want to climb.

"It would have been far more comfortable to have stayed at the inn and imbibed a few drinks in the sunshine. But that would not have accomplished the job."

Tracy is a moody and unpredictable man, as befits his Irish background. He can be austere one minute, warm the next. Except for close friends, he likes to be addressed as Mr. Tracy. He is remote, an enigma. On a movie set he is never directed—directors have too much respect for his ability.

Aside from acting, Tracy's big interest is the John Tracy Clinic which helps hard-of-hearing children, yet even here he gives virtually full credit to his wife, Louise, who organized the clinic years ago upon hearing their child was deaf, but thanks to methods developed in part at the clinic bearing his name, he leads a normal life.

As to retirement after 58 pictures and 26 years in Hollywood, Tracy waves the suggestion aside. "Not a chance," he says. "The only reason an actor retires is he's in bad health or nobody offers him a job. My health is okay and I still get plenty of offers. Anyhow, I'm not rich enough to quit work. They will have to shove hard to get me out of the way."

And how about his philisophy?

"Well, I learned a lesson climbing those mountains in France," he says. "While we were there, an average of two people a day lost their lives hurrying up the peaks. The toll—and the season was only half over—was 171 dead in Austria and France.

"We had a guide named Charles Balmat. He always cautioned me not to hurry. That's the worst thing to do. You must get an easy rhythm in your walk. Otherwise you'll tire—maybe even fall.'

"In other words, you must be thorough. Each step must be the right one. You must go slow in order to go fast.

That pretty well sums up my feelings about things in general.

SPENCER TRACY

Bishop Reads Backwards

MONTREAL (BUP)—Bishop Fulton J. Sheen took time off before addressing a public meeting here to tell how he maintains his high television rating. He rehearses in Italian, and then in French.

"I do not speak Italian extremely well. When I am finished with my discourse in Italian, the words are firmly imprinted in my mind," he said.

Next, Bishop Sheen said, he reads his discourse in French, "because the French language is so expressive." Finally, he delivers his talk in English before a group of nuns as the last rehearsal step before going on the air.

Bishop Sheen also said he sometimes reads novels back to front to get the ideas contained without worrying about plot.

Quiz Contestants Set Grim Pattern for Future

BY JOHN CROSBY

One of the great news events of all recorded history passed relatively unnoticed the other day. This was when 10-year-old Leonard Ross, contestant on the "Big Surprise" show, was guest of honor at the Bankers Club down in Wall street and was quelled about the stock market by veteran stock market reporters for hours.

This clearly is the hallmark of the future. Quiz contestants. Especially 10-year-old ones. We're going to consult them about everything—who we should marry, what stock to buy, not only when to commit suicide but how. I recall when the "Big Surprise" went on the air and a friend of mine said to me: "Week after week, a big surprise! Maybe a little surprise but 39 weeks of big surprises!"

I got a communique from a writer named Carroll Moore Jr. who has been brooding about quiz shows—to wit:

"When a child is born in 1984—to borrow a date from George Orwell—his parents decide upon, first his name, then his category. When the latter is determined, all efforts are bent on educating that child in one subject.

"Let's say the category chosen is 17th century Kentish brass-rubbings. The child is taught only this subject. He learns nothing else—no reading, no writing, no arithmetic. In fact, the average child doesn't even have to learn the days of the weeks unless his category happens to be 'Days of the Week.'

"When the contestant—in 1984 the word 'person' is obsolete and has been replaced by the word 'contestant'—reaches the age of 18 he appears on one of the 140 quiz shows on the air. There is no other TV entertainment during the evening. (For 13 weeks during 1983, a daring sponsor attempted an hour of bear-baiting but he was quickly flattened by the ratings.)

"The quiz show upon which our contestant eventually appears has a top prize limit (fixed by the F.C.C.) of $100,000. If he wins the top money (and few lose), the prize is automatically invested in an endowment fund to support him the rest of his life. He is forbidden by law to depress the labor market by taking a job but he is otherwise free to do as he pleases. His main purpose in life is to marry and breed more contestants and he usually does so. We find few rebels in 1984.

"In 1984, as in 1956, a man is known by the automobile he keeps. When you see a man driving a Cadillac convertible, you know at once that he was dope stuck with the booby prize. A man who is successful is also instantly recognizable. He is driving one of the popular-priced three—a Cowan, a Goodson or a Todman V-8. You know at once that such a man has faced Hal March II with confidence.

"God bless him!

"And God help the rest of us!"

Comedians for Fair

Boasting two-headed trombones and trained parakeets, Wilbur Hall and Rene are coming to Victoria as a main attraction at the Victoria Industrial and Agricultural Exhibition in the Arena May 7 to 12. The musical comics, who will appear twice a day during the fair, are veterans of stage, television, command performances in Europe, radio and night club appearances, including Las Vegas.

Those Jitters May Finish Judy's Live TV

BY SHEILAH GRAHAM

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—I'm betting that Judy Garland will never again do a live TV show.

She was paid $90,000 for the half-hour for General Electric and she was calm up to 1 p.m. on the day of the telecast. But just before show-time, oh the jitters.

Judy has two more shows for Ford jubilee at $100,000 each, but they will be filmed.

Lana Turner refused $50,000 for a half-hour at CBS television city, with the sensible explanation, "I'm not ready yet."

The Italians have named Anna Magnani "The Mother of the Italian Cinema." She can write her own ticket to return to Hollywood, but no one has come up with the right script. However, I hear Tennessee Williams is writing an original movie for the one and only Anna.

Teen-agers from all over America are making pilgrimages to the grave of James Dean. Too bad the academy did not give Jimmy a posthumous award. It was his dearest wish to win an Oscar. And he should have been awarded something for "Rebel Without a Cause."

Frank Sinatra wrote Ava Gardner, according to a friend, asking if and when she ever intended picking up her divorce decree, and she answered they could talk about it when he arrived in Spain for "The Pride and the Passion."

Now that Ann Sheridan has broken the ice with "Come Next Spring," she'll be making more former "Oomph" queen has put on weight and on her it looks good. To attain the poundage Annie spiked her ginger ale with cream.

Rita Hayworth has been in touch with dress designer I.Tanya, to talk about a wedding gown. I.Tanya, now in Hollywood, was formerly chief designer for Jacques Fath and designed Rita's clothes for her marriage to Prince Aly.

Dick Shawn's press agent telephoned me all the way from New York to tell me that Dick, now at the Flamingo, had a good role at Metro in "The Opposite Sex."

Dorothy Dandridge wants a month on the Riviera after she finishes her four-week engagement at the Savoy in London late in May. It all depends on 20th Century-Fox. The studio is shooting Dorothy's scenes in "Island in the Sun" in Jamaica. And they are checking weather conditions there before they give her a date on which to return to Hollywood.

Val Parnell of the London Palladium is paging Doris Day for an appearance there in June. If Doris accepts, Metro will premiere her current film, "Julie," in London at that time.

Three Dramas Greet Ball Season

Television salutes the baseball season with three dramas about famous diamond personalities this week.

"The Jackie Jensen Story" will be seen on channel 11 at 9.30 on Tuesday night. All-American Jackie stars in this TV story of his life.

Screen Directors Playhouse will present "The Rookie of the Year" on channel 4 on Wednesday night.

John Wayne and John Ford will be seen in the baseball story which stars Wayne's son, Pat, in the title role.

JEAN HAGEN

The story of the faith and love that made it possible for Lou Gehrig to face death will be told on "Climax!" on Thursday night.

Wendell Corey and Jean Hagen star in "The Lou Gehrig Story," a live TV presentation from Hollywood at 8.30 on channel 11.

"A Night to Remember," a factual account of the Titanic sinking, will be presented at 9 p.m., April 19.

"The Wedding" is the big television news this week and TV networks have assigned a small army of reporters and cameramen to its coverage.

First pictures of the Grace Kelly-Prince Rainier nuptials are expected to arrive by wirephoto Wednesday morning and will be shown on television as they arrive.

Newsreel films of the Monaco celebrations will likely arrive on Wednesday afternoon in time to be included in the evening newscasts.

Daytime network programs such as "Today," at 8 a.m., and "Home," at 11, have sent representatives to the wedding and will have film coverage throughout the week.

CBS-TV plans a special "Grace Kelly Wedding" report for next Saturday at 11 p.m., to be seen on both channel 11 and channel 12.

By popular request, the Vancouver TV production, "The Dangerous Years," will be repeated on channel 2, Thursday at 10.30.

"The Dangerous Years" is a film of an cancer operation, performed in Vancouver's Willow Chest Centre.

"Lolly Too Dum," popular Vancouver musical half-hour show which has been seen on Friday nights, will move to Thursday night this week.

The program, which features Ernie Prentice and Betty Phillips with the music of George Calangis, will be seen at 10 p.m. on channel 2.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet will be seen in a presentation based on a famous poem by Robert Service on Friday night.

"The Shooting of Dan McGrew" will be seen on channel 2 at 10 p.m., April 20.

Winnipeg dancers star in the Friday ballet which features music arranged and conducted by Eric Wild.

O'Connell Disgruntled

Oscar Contest Unfair Character Actor Says

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Oscar losers usually insist the best man won, but lovable Arthur O'Connell, the character actor-sensation of "Picnic," allowed as how Jack Lemmon beat him out in the wrong category.

Lemmon took home the Academy Award for best supporting actor for "Mister Roberts." Actually he was one of the stars of the picture but he entered the supporting Oscar race where he'd have a better chance.

"That's not fair," O'Connell said yesterday. "Rosalind Russell was starred in 'Picnic' and she could have won the supporting Oscar if she'd dropped to that category, but she refused.

"Why, when 'Picnic' opened I didn't even have any billing in the ads until after I was nominated for the Oscar. It isn't fair for a star to buck a guy who doesn't even get his name up there."

O'Connell's Oscar nomination made him one of the few character actors to have been boosted to stardom. He'll get "A" billing in his next picture, "The Monte Carlo Story," in which he'll romance the most glamorous queen of them all, Marlene Dietrich.

HOT PROPERTY

Arthur is no Rock Hudson but currently he's one of the hottest actors in town. He was snapped up for top roles in "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit," The Solid Gold Cadillac," "The Proud Ones," and currently "Bus Stop."

Before "Picnic" this new sensation was a successful but comparatively unknown Broadway actor for 27 years. How does he feel to have hit the jackpot in middle age?

"I'll tell you honestly—I'm just waiting for them to turn it off," he reflected. I'm making more money in a week than I made in a year on the stage. But I'm afraid to buy a fancy car—I might jinx this luck.

"I'll just pretend it isn't really happening. And maybe it will keep going."

Magnani Film Role Irks Nuns

ROME (AP)—The Franciscan Missionary Sisters of Mary have appealed to Premier Antonio Segni to prevent Italy's Oscar-winning dramatic actress Anna Magnani from wearing a nun's habit in her latest picture.

Her producer, Sandro Pallavicini said Thursday night, work on the new Magnani film, "Sister Letice and Paradise," will go ahead, with Anna wearing the nun's robes.

BCHIS for Services May Commence May 15

The provincial government hopes to start its plan to extend hospital insurance to dependents of servicemen in B.C. by May 15, Health Minister Eric Martin said recently after meeting representatives of the armed forces here.

Plan calls for a voluntary [illegible] make a token payment and have their dependents immediately covered by BCHIS without waiting for the one-year residence qualification.

Payments will be $10 for a spouce and $2.50 for each dependent child.

Mr. Martin said the meeting was "very cordial and it is our hope that the way has been prepared for the successful introduction of this new plan."

"We have every hope that the plan will be in force by May 15," he said.

Armed forces representatives [illegible] Col. J. C. Cave, RCA; and Sqdn. Ldr. Dean Freeman, RCAF.

New York Organist Plays Here Saturday

Two Concerts To Aid City Nursing Home

Official organist of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society, Miss Claire Coci, will appear in Victoria for the first time with a recital in Metropolitan United church at 8.30 p.m. Saturday.

Hers will be the second concert in two days on behalf of the Gorge Road Nursing Home. Musical Arts Studio Group presents several Victoria artists in Newstead hall, 734 Fort, at 8.30 p.m. Friday.

Soloists will be Bernard Rain, violin; Lorna Langley, harp; Britta Runge, recorder, and the Madrigal Singers.

Every theatre in town will have at least one good film during the next week or two.

Most interesting will be "Carousel," starting at the Royal, April 23, after "Miracle in the Rain," both for its plot and songs and for the fact it's the first film in the new Cinemascope process.

"Mr. Hulot's Holiday," one of the funniest films ever made, opens at the Plaza with "Divided Heart" tomorrow. The English "Court Martial" starts April 23.

Capitol opens "The Prisoner" Thursday. Alec Guinness is the imprisoned Cardinal and Jack Hawkins the Communist interrogator. "Picnic" reaches the Odeon Thursday, after "Carmen Jones."

The excellent Italian opera film "Rigoletto" begins at the Fox tomorrow, Frank Sinatra's "The Tender Trap" starts Wednesday.

Only theatre noting the wedding in Monaco is the Dominion, which opens a Grace Kelly double bill Friday —"Rear Window" and "To Catch a Thief." Atlas shows "View From Pompey's Head" tomorrow and "Man Who Never Was," Thursday.

At the Oak Bay, the choice is "Hobson's Choice," starring Charles Laughton and begining April 23. Best at Tillicum Outdoor is "Down Three Dark Streets" tomorrow and "Beachcomber," starring the late Robert Newton, Thursday.

Readings will be held in Langham Court Theatre today for the Victoria Theatre Guild presentation of "The Tender Trap" May 19 to 26. Co-directors are Jim and Phyllis Dulmage.

Brenda Myren school of dancing will present "Goldilocks and the Three Bears" in Oak Bay junior high school auditorium at 8 p.m. April 27. Some 80 persons will take part in the show.

Thomson Exhibit Popular

Showing of Tom Thomson paintings set a new attendance record of 5,100 persons at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria last month, curator Colin Graham announced yesterday.

Attendance was twice last year's monthly average. Of the total, more than 3,000 persons saw the two-week Thomson show, including 1,650 school children given guided tours.

Stock of 1,500 Thomson reproductions which the gallery expected to last the length of the show was sold in two days.

Display of paintings of Victoria ancestors and children will continue until April 22. Two days later, the gallery will open an exhibition of children's paintings from Oakland, Calif., sent north in return for a display sent to Oakland from Victoria early this year.

'Skiffle Group' Runaway Success

By JIM TAYLOR

An American folk song recorded by an Irish hillbilly in England is well on its way to the Canadian Top 10.

The London recording of "Rock Island Line" by Lonnie Donegan and his skiffle group seems to be picking up where "16 Tons" left off. Donegan is an Irish guitarist who plays between numbers by the Chris Barber band in London, accompanied by a washboard-and-bass "skiffle group" — slang for a group that plays jam sessions to pay the rent.

When the band cut a new album, the group was turned loose on "Rock Island Line," with the result that it became a major hit in England.

Which just goes to show you don't need echo chambers and tricky microphones to get a popular record.

VIEWS OF SPORT

By Red Smith

For the first time in his 35 or 36 years, Ray Robinson looks like a full-fledged middleweight. Sitting with him Thursday in the tiny dressing room of his health camp here at Long Pond Inn, it was difficult to say where he showed the pounds he didn't show before. The blue boxing trunks which he pulled over his trim hips still looked as though they'd been bought in the boys' department. The superbly symmetrical legs seemed as clean and springy as ever, the tapered waist as flat. Yet there was a vague impression of settled maturity, the faint beginning of a roll at the nape of the neck, maybe a suggestion of new roundness in the contour of the face.

Out in the gym where the boxing ring stands, a poster advertised an excursion flight to the championship fight with Bobo Olson in Los Angeles, May 18. "Be at ringside," it exhorted, "when Sugar makes a bobo out of Bobo." Another placard plugged a show in Paterson, N.J., on Saturday where Robinson will box two rounds each with three opponents. "To see if I can go six rounds," Ray said.

Now, changing clothes and handaging and taping his hands, the fighter was talking about Ray Robinson—not Walker Smith, which was Sugar's square name before he changed it legally, but the original Ray Robinson whose name he swiped. He was saying that he, Walker Smith, had started as an amateur at 12, "and on May 3 I'll be 35, no matter what you read in the book. Look up Walker Smith's age, not Ray Robinson's." In the record book, May 3 goes as his 36th birthday.

Name on a Card

"Was Robinson a favorite name of yours?" a visitor asked George Gainford, the first of the fighter's numberless managers. "I know you always managed to have somebody named Robinson fighting for you in the amateurs."

"I'll answer that," the champion said, "because he'll lie to you. He had so many fighters he didn't know their names. He just handed around the cards—the licences—without reading 'em. 'Here, this is you.' First time they called me for a fight, 'Robinson, the doctor will examine you.' I looked around for Robinson. Didn't know it was me."

"And was there really a Ray Robinson?"

"Sure. I see him around once in a while. I told him, 'I borrowed your name and I always meant to give it back but I found out I couldn't.' He was tending bar somewhere."

"But he was a fighter?"

"He had the same record as George here," Ray said. "George had one fight in the old Armory and got knocked out. His next fight was when they tried to get him back in again."

You Feel Like an Animal

The fighter has been here since the first week in February, running through the mountains near the cabin where he lives, boxing when he feels like it in the gym where Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano and so many others worked when the place was run by Eddie MacDonald and Oliver Cromwell, the doughty Roundheads who sold out recently to some Cavaliers. The recent snows in these hills didn't keep him off the road.

"I like to run with him in the snow," Gainford said, and Robinson snorted with disgust.

"You run!" he said, "in the car while I do my five miles. One day they got stuck in the snow and had to walk two miles back to camp. Did I laugh!"

After 23 good years, Robinson said, he still found it possible to get a certain pleasure from training. It's a chore but after so many years a fellow knows what he must do to achieve the condition he needs in his work, "and when you been up here long enough living like an animal, you get to feel like an animal."

This Time for Real, Maybe

"I'll ask you the inevitable awkward question," a visitor said, "is this fight really coming off on the 18th?" (Ray's return with the man he knocked loose from the title last December has been postponed once, and in the mob there has been talk that Robinson would by-pass Olson and take Carmen Basilio instead.)

"I don't know why it shouldn't," Ray said, "a reporter asked me the other day if I thought Olson would show up. I told him 'That's kinda funny. Before the fight in Chicago last winter, you were asking if I was going to show up.'"

"Olson will show up," Robinson said, "I got no doubts about his courage. Why shouldn't he? He showed up three times before.

"I won't say I was sorry the fight in Chicago ended in two rounds. I wouldn't lie to you. I would've been glad if it ended in the first round. But this time I'd kind of like to show the people I can go 15 rounds or 20, whatever they say."

"Do it in the dressing room," Gainford said, "end the fight in one and then call the reporters in the dressing room and you shadow-box 14 rounds for them. That's all right with me."

Farmers Jump into Spring Training

Warm spring days herald the start of another baseball season and members of Victoria's Farmer Construction club welcomed yesterday's sunshine as they held their first outdoor workout of the year. Going through their conditioning paces at Royal Athletic park were pitchers Bill Garner, left, Paul Beck, centre, and Lowell Hodges. Farmers, who play their opening game in the newly-formed, nine-team Northwestern International League at Athletic park May 21, will practice again this morning.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan)

Victoria Club Accepted By Coast Soccer League

By IAN GLENDAY

Victoria's two-month battle to gain admittance into the Pacific Coast Summer Soccer League ended in success last night when the four Mainland teams agreed to accept George Eade's application under the conditions laid down by the four-member league executive.

This clears the way," said secretary-manager Jock Hendry last night in announcing that the four clubs — New Westminster Royals, St. Andrews, North Shore United and Halecos — had accepted by letter Victoria United's application for entry.

"We (the executive)—have been impressed by Victoria's sincerity and we feel certain that United will be beneficial to the league," Hendry added. "We feel the inclusion of Victoria is a good, calculated risk."

Victoria's bid for entry twice was unanimously rejected by the mainland clubs, the last time at a special meeting in Vancouver Thursday night, against the recommendation of the executive. The decision threw the meeting into a turmoil. The executive immediately resigned but later agreed to return to office if the mainland clubs accepted Victoria.

DEADLINE SET

Hendry stipulated at Thursday night's meeting that the clubs must submit a statement to the executive by 5 p.m. Saturday accepting Victoria. Hendry reported last night that the clubs had filed statements and that the executive members had withdrawn their notices of resignation.

Hendry, who said, "We'll run the whole show from now on," immediately went to work last night to draw up a schedule. Tentative plans call for the league to open May 21 on the Mainland with the first game in Victoria, May 25.

The schedule will be divided into halves, with the first and second-half winners meeting for the championship. The season will wind up in late August or early September, depending on the number of postponed games, and each team will play either 20 or 24 games.

It's still not certain how many home games Victoria will have, although Hendry stressed last night that one game will be played every week in Victoria, probably on Friday nights. United officials are attempting to obtain the use of Royal Athletic park for all home games, but a decision on whether the park is obtainable won't be made until the schedule is released.

4-P-30

STALLING OUT

Hendry plans to introduce two half-hour periods of play with the use of a time clock, thereby eliminating much of the stalling presently employed by teams attempting to protect a lead in the final minutes of a match.

He also favors changing referees during the season with Victoria officials handling one or two games in Vancouver and Mainland officials working several games here.

Eade, president and sponsor of United, said last night he was "very satisfied with the way things have turned out."

We will do our utmost to produce a contending team," he added.

An organizational meeting is open for any players interested in attending workouts. "We will be held this week to set up an executive, although the club want to field the strongest team can't sign any players until the 'we can," he added.

Take Series Lead

Warriors Score Overtime Victory

By GRAHAM McMULLIN

VANCOUVER (CP)—Defenceman Danny Summers broke up a sudden-death overtime session with a 20-foot blast that gave Winnipeg Warriors a 3-2 decision over Vancouver Canucks in a Western Hockey League final game here Saturday night.

The win rocketed Winnipeg into a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series. It was their second win in a row on Vancouver's ice.

They beat the Canucks 5-1 here Friday night after losing the opener 3-1.

The next three games—up to three if necessary—will go in the Winnipeg arena.

FRANTIC ACTION

About 5,000 fans watched the teams roar through 20 minutes of frantic action in the third period without scoring a goal or drawing a penalty.

The entire Warrior bench stormed out on the ice to surround Summers after he took Paul Masnick's pass and fired the final shot of the game at 5:18 of the overtime period.

Vancouver opened the scoring at 1:23 of the first but the Warriors came back with a goal at 12:09, both teams missed heart-stopping chances and both goalies pulled off spectacular saves but it seemed only a question of time before the powerful Warrior machine found the combination.

Winnipeg took a 2-1 lead at 9:58 of the second and had the Canucks on the ropes before Bob Kabel lifted the west coast team with the tying goal at 14:46.

Ray Cyr scored the other Canuck goal while Eric Nesterenko and Bill Burega counted for Winnipeg.

Winnipeg (Goal—Chadwick; defence, Shero, Kraftna; forwards, Burega, Korewards, Aldcorn, Nesterenko, Symmons, Mayor, Masnick, Bailey, Burchell, Cullen, Mosienko, Hoekstra.

They'll Gallop For $122,500

SEATTLE (AP) — Longacres Race Track will present 19 major stake races worth $122,500 in its 60-day season starting Friday, Webb Everett, director of racing, announced Saturday.

Each stake will be worth at least $5,000. Two—the Longacres Derby and Seattle Handicap—will be gross guaranteed races of $10,000 each. The Longacres Mile, annual track feature, will be valued at $20,000.

Six stake races are designed exclusively for Washington-bred horses. In addition, the $5,000 added Stallion Stakes is for two-year-olds sired by Washington stallions. The Washington futurity is the richest race for homebreds, at $7,500 added.

Nortowns Win Junior Crown

WINNIPEG (CP) — Toronto Nortowns successfully defended their Canadian Junior Basketball championship title here Saturday night, downing YMCA Blues, 71-55, in the fifth and deciding game of their best-of-five Canadian final.

The defending champions won the first game of the series, 75-61, and the third, 70-58, but dropped the second and fourth games 83-74 and 63-52 after the Blues came from behind each time.

Candidates for Rocky's Crown Start Mayhem Series May 9

Ranking heavyweights will meet May 9 in the first become champion if Rocky Marciano retires.

Miami Beach promoter Chris Dundee announced the 12-round nationally televised match and said that the International Boxing Club had agreed to the fight. The IBC plans to conduct several matches between the top contenders for the heavyweight crown.

Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson, ranked No. 2 among the heavies, will probably fight the winner of the Baker-Holman match. However, the colorful Jackson was panned by light heavyweight champion Archie Moore as a possible opponent for a title bout with Marciano.

Moore said "I could beat him (Jackson) and another guy in the same night. The big shots of boxing, the lads who don't usually get their names in the papers, have a nice little deal all set up. I'm rated the No. 1 heavyweight contender but that doesn't seem to make any difference to the men who pull the strings."

Maroons Meet Vernon Team

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Chatham Maroons unleashed a devastating first-period offensive Friday night to defeat Saint John Beavers 5-2 and enter the Allan Cup finals.

Maroons, who captured the eastern Canada senior hockey crown with Friday night's victory, now meet Vernon Canadians for the Canadian title.

COOPER BEATS ROSE

MELBOURNE (AP) — Australian Davis Cupper Ashley Cooper Saturday won his first major tennis title. He defeated Mervyn Rose in the final of the national hardcourt singles 7-5, 6-4, 9-11, 6-4.

Wampler Grabs Lead; Kesselring Moves Up

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UP)—Fred Wampler came out of the depths of the field Saturday with a record-equalling seven-under-par 64 to take a one-stroke lead in the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament. Wampler's 52-hole total was 208.

Wampler tied the competitive course record set by Dave Douglas four years ago. He was nine strokes back of Sam Snead at the start of yesterday's round.

Snead and Frank Stranahan fell into a two-way tie for second at 209.

Snead, the defending champion, blew to a 74 when his putting game faltered after two sub-par rounds.

Stranahan, the muscular former British amateur champion from Toledo, O., had his wild streak Friday and nicked par by three strokes Saturday, posting a 68.

Gerry Kesselring of Toronto fired a 67 yesterday and moved into a fourth-place tie with Bill Casper. Doug Ford slipped from second to sixth place with a 71.

Wampler, who copped the intercollegiate title at Purdue in 1950, has been playing the circuit for four years. His only tournament victory was the Los Angeles open two years ago and he finished in the money for the first time this year at San Antonio.

Montreal Goes Mad Over Champs

MONTREAL (CP) — Bands blared and sirens screamed as this city's hockey-mad populace turned out to honor Montreal Canadiens in a 30-mile parade yesterday.

The hockey champs, who defeated Detroit Red Wings for the Stanley Cup, beamed happily and waved to the crowds surrounding their convertibles.

Coach Toe Blake, perched atop his convertible like a benevolent potentate, acknowledged the cheers with the aplomb of a man who led Canadiens to the National Hockey League championship in his first year as an NHL coach.

The mighty Maurice Rocket Richard, his often-grim visage relaxed in a grin, shared plaudits with such stars as Jean Beliveau, Jacques Plante and Boom-Boom Geoffrion.

Swaps Easy Winner; Tops World Record

HALLANDALE, Fla. (UP)—Kentucky Derby champion Swaps, carrying 130 pounds like a feather, ran off with the $25,000 Borward Handicap in world record time Saturday before a gasping Gulfstream park crowd of 20,345.

Jockey Willie Shoemaker kept Swaps under a tight hold for all but the last few yards of the mile and 70-yard race and the big chestnut champion went under the wire two and one-quarter lengths in front of Galdar. Our Go finished third, another five lengths back in the field of eight handicap horses.

Swaps, making only his second appearance of 1956 and his first since Feb. 17 at Santa Anita, ran the distance in one minute, 39 and three-fifths seconds to knock two-fifths of a second off the world mark for one mile and 70 yards, set by South Dakota at River Downs in 1945.

The long-legged four-year-old colt owned by Rex Ellsworth, was hardly breathing heavily at the end of the race. Shoemaker kept him under such a snug hold throughout most of the running that Swaps galloped with his head twisted slightly to one side.

His jockey let him loose at the turn for home and Swaps made up five lengths in the wink of an eye to catch the pace-setting Two Fisted and head into the stretch three lengths on top.

Galdar, ridden by Earl Van Hook and carrying a feathery 105 pounds, came from far back to challenge the 1955 Kentucky Derby winner. Galdar didn't have a chance of catching Swaps, and just to make sure, Shoemaker turned Swaps loose in the last 50 yards to sail under the wire pulling away.

Fights Friday

Canadian lightweight champion last year, clever Jimmy Walters of Vancouver will be one of the top contenders for the "champion of champions" award in the second annual Optimist Club "Tournament of Champions" amateur boxing show at Central Junior High school Friday and Saturday. Winner of Vancouver Golden Gloves title this year, Walters also won a decision over Norm Jorgenson, Canadian welter champ in 1955.

Celebrates 62nd Birthday . . . . . . By Running 6.23.4 Mile

Joie Thinks American Athletes Getting Soft

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (BUP) — Joie Ray, former king of United States distance men, celebrated his 62nd birthday Friday by running a mile against the clock.

His time was 6:23.4.

Ray, who participated in three Olympic Games for the United States in 1920-24-28, has been running miles on his birthday for the past four years. This year's time was a new record, his previous best 6:30.

Now a steel-worker at Gary, Ind., the little miler hasn't run a competitive race since 1933 but he remains in excellent physical condition, attested by his amazing mile.

Ray plans to continue the annual birthday mile "until I die."

He is credited with having run more competitive distance races than any other man in United States history. He has 470 medals and trophies he won in his illustrious career.

Ray happened to run the race in Champaign because of some tests being conducted by Dr. T. K. Cureton, University of Illinois researcher, who has conducted studies of the physical condition of some of the world's greatest athletes.

Ray feels there is a deterioration process going on in United States athletes because of improper conditioning.

"Improved training methods have caused the performances in track and field to improve remarkably," Ray pointed out. "But the athletes don't last as long, and it's because they don't condition themselves.

"And high school coaching has cut off the supply of outstanding prospects. Many of the fine runners are burned out before they get to college. Football coaches are coaching track. They don't know the proper methods of getting a boy ready for a race and can't teach a boy how to pace himself in a race.

"Too many of the finest prospects are lost because of this.

"If the athletes in the United States continue to deteriorate at the pace they are at the present we'll lose the Olympic Games. We may lose them

K. Christiansen

PERRY SMART GIRL knows it's the SIZE of bulbs that sets the price per flower. A smart gardener knows the price per flower in daffodils, not the price per bulb. Twelve of Christiansen's large economy sized bulbs will give you 95 or more lovely large daffodils next spring. At 89¢, standard sized bulbs are more than 300 each and are in many varieties to choose from. You will be delighted with Victoria's Most Interesting Garden, and you will be agreeably surprised when these large, fat bulbs are delivered to you next fall. The Stanley Beckwith bus passes the door.

$75,000 Fee For Easements

Provincial government expects to receive $75,000 from fees to be levied against Westcoast Transmission Co. for 24 easements granted for the proposed pipeline from the Peace River to...

Government officials disclosed yesterday that the company will pay 50 cents a rod from the Peace River to Hope and twice that amount from Hope to the end of the line at Huntington, in the Fraser valley.

Nine of the easements have been granted to date. Each of the 24 is 1,980 feet wide to allow the company to choose the most suitable 60-foot path for the pipeline.

New Judges To Be Named

Two additional judges are expected to be appointed to the B.C. Supreme Court this year.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner said Friday he has made all the necessary representations to Justice Minister Garson at Ottawa as being about the appointments.

At the recent session of the legislature the Supreme Court Act was amended to allow for an increase in Supreme Court membership to 11 from nine.

It now is up to Ottawa to make the appointments.

Sooke Group Led By Sam Fedosenko

SOOKE—Sam Fedosenko was re-elected president of the Sooke Athletic Association at the annual meeting this week. L. Buster Monk remains as vice-president. Mrs. Sam Fedosenko is secretary and Mrs. Jack Alpen treasurer.

Cancer of the skin is the commonest form of cancer in men. If treated early it can nearly always be cured.

Do It Yourself

Use Partitions for Storage

By J. RALPH DALZELL

Extra home storage space can be made available in any wood frame and plastered inside partition with insert shelves.

Make spaces as needed for general goods, for canned goods and for soap powders and short items or other normal bathroom supplies.

Making the shelves and installing them is easy for any handyman.

Lengths depend upon the number of shelves needed with spacing about nine inches between them.

Use a square to assure square conditions in the construction.

Attach the plywood backing with small brads, and attach the trim after the assembly has been installed.

Stud locations will be where the tapping sounds solid.

Score and cut the plaster with hammer and chisel along lines AB, BC, CD and DA, then remove plaster from the area.

Tourists, Tax-Fugitives Boost Bahamas' Budget

By HAL BOYLE

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Tourists and tax-fugitives [illegible] boom in the islands of the Bahamas.

The first tourist was Chris[illegible]

A few old-timers fear the influx of tourists will turn conservative Nassau into "another Miami." But most Bahamians are glad to see a fellow from out of town and sell him anything from a $1.50 straw hat to a $60,000 motor sailboat.

[illegible] has been for the most part a quiet few. Now like Florida its neighbor across the blue-green waters, it is becoming a year-round vacation haunt for the many.

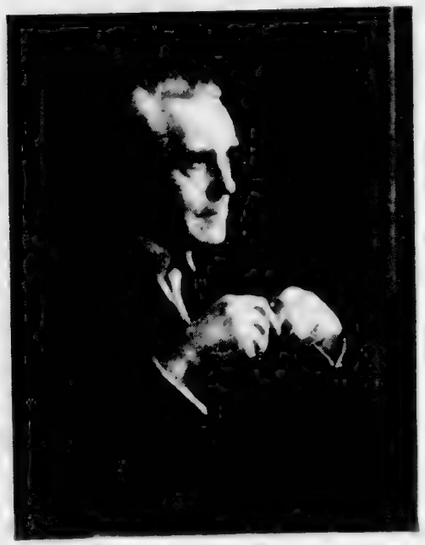
Throughout Britain He's Called "Mr. British Columbia"



WILLIAM ALEXANDER McADAM

By RICHARD L. THOMAS
Daily Colonist London Correspondent

LONDON—It is just 42 years ago that the daughter of the founder of Duncan, Miss Inez Duncan, married a 24-year-old accountant by the name of William Alexander McAdam who had been born in Manchester and had emigrated to British Columbia four years earlier.

Mr. and Mrs. McAdam are celebrating their anniversary in London today, turning back the pages and learning all over again, perhaps, how to live life excitingly, though the circumstances may seem ordinary enough.

DID YOU KNOW . . .

Why some modern dog collars are studded? They are all that remains to remind us of the fighting dogs of ancient Rome. These dogs, usually mastiffs, were used by the Roman armies to guard supplies and lines of communications and also to fight in the front line. A contemporary account of the battle between Marius and the Cimbir in 101 B.C., says these dogs, "the size of asses and as fierce as lions," were the bravest warriors on the field. The writer says they were covered with rich cloth, silver collars and neck rings, and a circle of iron points round the neck. Some were clad altogether in armor. By the way, history records that Marius (Rome) defeated the Cimbir (Germans). Not surprising really for the Cimbir were without dogs.

Leaded Glass Grotto Doors Ready for Renewed Swing

By CECIL CLARK

IT'S always a thrill when an amateur archaeologist stumbles on some relic of a past civilization. Something of the like happened in Victoria last week, and Vic Clarke, student of these things (who happens to make Lucky Lager on the side) tipped me off to the discovery.

It had to do with the Grotto. Now I know old-timers' eyes will mist at the mention of this historic spot, and newcomers from Saskatchewan will imagine it some sort of hideout used by pioneer Victorians in moments of stress. In a way they'd be right.

For the Grotto was just about B.C.'s most famous pub, opened 80 years ago on Trounce Alley by Victoria's first Mardi-gras king, Lorin A. Mardenfeld.

Gay Bill, Yellow Plume Mark Tufted Puffin

By C. J. GUIGUET

THE puffins are the most colorful of the alcids found along the British Columbia coast. Two species of puffin occur here and although so far we have no authentic records for the horned puffin there is little doubt that it occurs regularly in northern waters. The tufted puffin, however, is relatively common, and during the summer months is extremely plentiful on certain islands along this coast.

Churches Losing, Clerics Admit

'Three-Ring' Service Needed To Fight TV

Television has challenged Victoria clergymen for the eyes and ears of their congregations.

A Colonist survey of ministers disclosed yesterday that attendance at Sunday evening services has dropped by as much as 60 per cent with the increasing popularity of TV in the last few years.

The "best" programs of the week are broadcast Sunday night, one minister mourned. "It would take a three-ring circus to compete."

In an effort to keep their evening congregations, many ministers have employed movies, question periods, conversation sermons, special speakers and other less formal types of service.

Still the crowds slip away to the comfort of a couch and a television set.

Perhaps most of these TV fans swell morning congregations, which have outgrown the capacity of some churches. But without a doubt, many are lost to the churches.

Rev. W. Hare H. ... of St. George-the-Martyr ... Anglican Church has experienced diffi-culty in accommodating morn-ing congregations. Last ... evening attendance was 60 per ...

'Little Less Formal'

Another church, Metropolitan United, is considering televising services when TV comes to Victoria.

'TV Here To Stay'

"Some youngsters occasionally want to get out of choir practice to attend a wild west show," said Rev. W. F. Greenhalgh of St. Alban's Anglican church. "But it hasn't hurt me as much as other churches."

Perhaps that is because we are a large downtown church and people drive here from all over the city," he said. "In other parts of Canada clergy-men have almost folded up evensong."

Sod Turned for City TV

Preliminary 'spade work' on the site of Victoria's first privately-owned television station was carried out by President David Alexander, right, and Manager Clarence White yesterday. Double Duty Print

By TRACY ADRIAN

This pretty print is a wardrobe wonder in that it can be worn now under coats or with little furs is perfect attire for daytime when the weather is warmer, and can go right on for cocktails after five.

The frock is of printed silk with daisies on a blue background with a self belt. There is a V of blue net at the neckline of the bodice with appliques of cut out daisies from the print sewn onto the net. The same treatment is used at the bottom of the short sleeves. Slight flares at the sides and back of the skirt give fullness for walking but do not at all detract from its slender line.

Life of 'Mrs. Walter Mitty' Theme of Novel Fashion Show

WHO IS REAL, O Pa... Who is Mrs. Walter Mitty?

According to a Montreal woman's club, she's the average home maker who dreams of glamor but cannot always achieve it.

James Thurber's story, The Secret Life of Walter Mitty, told of a clerk who dreamed he was glamorous women so she would be like every kind of hero.

Next week members of the [illegible] will be initiated [illegible] Montreal [illegible] the latest fashions.

DREAMS OF GLAMOR

The show is the inspiration of Mrs. Paul Foldes who has written a parody concerning [illegible] with Mrs. Mitty. In the [illegible] of Mrs. Foldes the mother of one [illegible] she describes Mrs. Mitty.

She dreams of appearing on the beach in an outlandish bathing suit trimmed with mink. Instead she toddles out with inflated ducks, hampers, food, so loaded down you can't see that new bathing suit at all.

Mrs. Foldes says every woman dreams of the wonderful career she would have had if her boy hadn't come along. Even if her [illegible] she thinks she might have been a model to a top-flight executive.

Mrs. Foldes says she write the poetry by eating, drinking and sleeping Mrs. Mitty. In fact her husband and small son are thoroughly tired of the character.

In the show Mrs. Mitty may be allowed to wear a smart outfit at the end [illegible] a compromise between the dreams and the ultimate. The author of the show gives a hint of this when she says she'll have to do something to redeem the poor woman.

New Member Welcomed To Ganges Chapter IODE

GANGES — Regent Mrs. V. C. Best presided at the regular meeting of H.M.S. Ganges chapter held on Friday afternoon in the board room of Mahon Hall.

Treasurer's report showed a balance of $108.14 with $75 outstanding in bills.

Miss Mary Lees, secretary of Services Home and Abroad, reported several booklets made of Christmas cards to be sent to children of immigrants arriving in Canada and there was also a display of baby woollens that had been knitted by the chapter.

The regent was appointed as delegate to the provincial annual meeting in Vancouver on April 17, 18 and 19.

A new member, Mrs. F. Foss, joined the chapter. A small gift was presented to Miss Fiona A. Kerr in recognition of her work as secretary.

It was decided to hold home cooking stalls on the first Saturday of each month during the summer, the first, which will be held on May 5, will be under the convenership of Mrs. Best and Miss Aitkens.

Following adjournment tea was served by Mrs. J. Byron and Miss W. Eagles.

Lovely Gardens To Be Opened for Festival

Many of Victoria's beautiful gardens will be opened to the public during the Spring Garden Festival which starts on Wednesday, May 2 and ends on the afternoon of Saturday, May 5. Mrs. S. Atokhazi above is pictured in the garden of her home at 1146 Fairfield road which will be on view Thursday and Saturday afternoons. This garden is set in natural glacial rock formation and with pines and lawns has a fairyland appearance at this time of year.

Mrs. Harold Husband, left, and Mrs. R. H. Edgell pictured in the garden at "Little Pease," the Edgell home at 3230 Beach drive. The Edgell gardens will be open during the Festival on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. Here a fine display of flowering cherry and crab trees will be at their height for the tour. Young Tennis Star Seeks Major Wins To Cap Long Drive

By EILEEN LEAROYD

A pretty Victoria teenager has love on her mind. Love of a game called tennis.

The girl is Sue Butt and obviously tennis loves her right back for she is seeded fourth in Canada among [illegible] women players and has accumulated quite a string of titles for her 18 years.

Last summer she [illegible] ... was the Victoria girls' singles champion ... up in both singles and doubles as well as the Victoria senior women's [illegible].

WINS ISLAND OPEN

[illegible] in the matches held at Courtenay and also the Women's Victoria [illegible] ... a singles and doubles. She has Victoria hopes [illegible] year. Mrs. Mary [illegible] ... was runner-up last year to Miss Bridget Dew.

She then went [illegible] ... to take the B.C. open ... singles played here and [illegible] ... B.C. ranked [illegible] ... crack opponents played in Vancouver.

Last year [illegible] ... she sounded [illegible] among Canadian [illegible] ... make her she looks sure of ... among B.C. juniors and even among B.C. seniors. She is also ready for seniors of the Pacific Northwest.

She won [illegible] ... these matches last year will [illegible] ... on some [illegible] ... very hard but satisfying work.

SEEKS NATIONAL TITLE

Her ambition [illegible] ... is to get [illegible] ... for the Canadian junior championships held in Ottawa this summer. Before that she will likely [illegible] ... a circuit in Washington and Oregon and perhaps [illegible] ... the Canadian juniors. This is her last year as a junior.

She has got over the fact that [illegible] ... was a swimmer. Her favorite [illegible] ... and the ... to ...

It was not [illegible] ... that [illegible] ... the tennis [illegible] ... was taking [illegible] ... serious. And although she [illegible] ... and at Victoria College she has attained the [illegible] ... one hour's tennis [illegible] ... morning [illegible] ... it's time to [illegible] ... the rest of the day to tennis.

WEATHER IGNORED

People passing the Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club courts this winter possibly wondered why the tennis [illegible] ... with some [illegible] ... in all kinds of weather.

The [illegible] ... who should [illegible] ... Sue's father, Jack Butt.

[illegible] ... is a member of the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club and [illegible] ... at [illegible] ... Mount St. Michael's [illegible] ... Sue is also [illegible] ... Pacific Northwest and is a junior doubles partner.

He started [illegible] ... playing tennis as a child and encouraged his daughter when she was [illegible].

SUCCESS FORMULA

He [illegible] ... credit for Sue's success is that she was [illegible] ... proper form and [illegible] ... from the very beginning.

"... is a powerful ground [illegible] ... with [illegible] ... power [illegible] ... and backhand down [illegible] ... Mr. Butt. "... the rest of her game is [illegible] ... and follows [illegible] ... net."

As for the difference between singles and doubles, Mr. Butt says that [illegible] ... is all [illegible] ... but [illegible] ... more [illegible] ... and placement [illegible].

ALSO DEBUTANTE

The young [illegible] ... played a debutante [illegible] ... winter [illegible] ... and particularly [illegible] ... during [illegible] ... this year. [illegible] ... attended [illegible] ... seems interested in a great [illegible] ... of activities.

She attended [illegible] ... House at Government House [illegible] ... the Hunt Ball.

At [illegible] ... Hunt she was [illegible] ... of the [illegible] ... secretaries of the [illegible] ... a member of the [illegible] ... club and played basketball, [illegible] ... tennis, ping-pong and badminton.

For the year Sue is going steady—with tennis.

Junior star Sue Butt demonstrates forehand style . . .

Plea for Dignity

Prince Fears His Wedding Will Become Giant Circus

News Army Poses Biggest Headache

By EDDIE GILMORE

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Prince Rainier and a handful of Monacan officials grappled this week with mounting press problems posed by the Rainier-Kelly wedding.

"I don't want this wedding to become a circus," said the prince. "I want it to be dignified and I can be proud about it all I have to."

Whatever the prince's fears are, they probably won't come true. He presumably is going to look very much like a king when he and Princess Grace Kelly of Philadelphia are married April 19.

But said a young woman behind the scenes working for the prince: "I'm afraid it's going to be much more than that."

City Man Gets Royal Honor

Victoria born and educated Dr. G. Neil Perry was elected Commander of the Order of the Star of Ethiopia at a recent ceremony in his honor March 30th, Emperor Haile Selassie.

Dr. Perry had been on leave from the Mount Burk for two years to organize the Ethiopian Air Force.

Dr. Perry is now on his way to Washington, D.C., for a new post.

His mother Mrs. Agnes M. Perry lives at 964 Empress Ave.

Jubilee Nurses' Entry Triple Festival Winner

By BERT BINNY

In the final burst of eclipse-cash, their athletes, the Commonwealth Games and the eclipse of post-Olympics interest by the added cost the Eighth Southern Nations Island Drama Festival closed the curtain on one of the spectators last night.

It has been a good festival, perhaps not as good as that of 1955 but nevertheless altogether worthwhile, because it is not completely a matter of winning awards.

The theatres reason for being is the opportunity to entertain and, to move the spectators. Many more actresses and actors accomplished that than received honors.

TO BE REPEATED

These were "Hello, Out There" by the Art Gallery Intimate stage, "The Invisible Worm" by the Civil Service Players' Guild, and "Eros at Breakfast" by the Royal Jubilee Hospital Student Nurses' Club.

Best actor was A. F. [illegible] for his performance in the "one man in [illegible] Out There."

THREE AWARDS

The remaining three awards all went to the Island drama league. Outdoor Theatre Club Best play was [illegible] Invisible Worm." Best [illegible] Eros at Breakfast." Best actress Dorothy Mercer [illegible] Out There."

According to the official program some 60 players participated in this festival with good news knows how many directors, assistants, prompters, makeup artists, stage managers, electricians and others in back.

and, finally, to the continued health of the legitimate stage.

That Monaco Affair 'Capitalist Money Plot'

LONDON (UP) — Britain's communist Daily worker finally got around to "the wedding" Saturday. As might be expected, the Worker saw nothing but a capitalist money deal.

The Worker hinted that Monaco's financial circles combined with Rainier's spiritual adviser, The Rev. Francis Tucker, to arrange the match. "This was a romance with an unquestionable cash register ring."

5 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness and words of sympathy and the beautiful floral offerings received from friends and relatives in our sad bereavement in the loss of our dear wife and mother. To all those who were so helpful, we give our special thanks to Dr. N. L. Goodwin, Dr. D. C. Lucas and Dr. O. F. Hones, Sisters and nurses of St. Joseph's Hospital, the Rev. G. R. Kaa and Jack, Johnny, Joy and Teddy Elliott.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends for and sympathy and the beautiful floral offerings, memorial offerings and other acts of kindness during the sad loss of our dear mother, Walter S. Miles. Special thanks to Dean Whitlow, the choir, the organist, the pallbearers and Chaplain, Funeral Chapel staff, Mrs. Olive Miles, Tom and Gerry.

We wish to extend our thanks and appreciation for the messages of sympathy and the many beautiful floral offerings received from our friends and relatives in our sad bereavement in the loss of our dear husband, father, grandfather, brother-in-law and uncle, Robert Currie. Special thanks to Rev. Shearer and Mrs. H. A. Blackburn.

6 IN MEMORIAM

CLIFF—In fond and loving memory of our dear father, Harold Cliff, who passed away April 16, 1949.

You can not have one Mother,
You can not have one Dad,
But you have one Mother,
Who will be as true to you,
As the world is true and true.
She asks nothing in return,
But a little love from you.
To your Mother you could turn.
It is so sad and sore and grave
To the one Mother God ever made.
Forgotten, never shone on Day,
And by husband, Charles, sadly missed.
Dawning, three years since we said,
Farewell to one and grandchildren.

FRANT—In loving memory of our beloved son, Norman George, killed in the service of his Country in Aurikan on April 15, 1945.

In the garden of memories,
Sadly missed by his loving mother and dad, Mae and Eddie Frant.

MEIKLEJOHN—In memory of Clarence Meiklejohn who passed away one year ago, April 15, 1955.

One year has passed since that sad day,
Where one we loved was called away.
God took him home it was His will,
Within our hearts he lies still.
—Remembered and missed every day by wife and family.

RYALL—Margaret O'Fynn in loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away April 14, 1942.

Though her earthly form is gone,
Memory lingers on and on.
Though her smiling face is hidden,
Memories of her are unbidden.
—Remembered and missed every day by daughter and sister, Mary Ryall.

Time is the fare we have to pay,
And the hands I cannot touch,
I shall never lose sweet memories
Of one so much.
—Ever remembered by her husband, Charlie.

Strike Threat Posed As Painters Bargain

By BILL MAVOR

A potential strike threat exists with members of Victoria Painters' Union (AFL-TLC) in negotiation with contractors of the Victoria Building Industries Exchange.

The contractors have rejected a unanimous conciliation board recommendation for a two-year agreement covering wage increases of 24 cents an hour for employees.

The exchange has notified the labor department of its decision and requested that any strike vote be supervised according to terms of the Labor Relations Act.

Disclosure of the rejection and application for supervision was made in a brief by independent painting contractors to conciliation board hearings. The board's recommendations affecting the independents and union have not yet been given.

The union meets at 11 a.m. today to consider recommendations affecting exchange contractors. Indications are the union will accept the recommendations.

If workers accept, a strike vote could be applied for by the union unless it decides to seek further negotiations. Current pay rates are $2.05 hourly for brush and $2.15 for spray painters.

The Union Industries Show, described by veteran trade unionists Ed Smith as the "biggest union label display in the world," will open in Seattle April 20.

The show will include displays of union-made products, demonstrations and exhibits on production.

Unions in B.C. are also being urged to submit displays for the label display at the Toronto merger convention April 22.

A strike against the Kohler Company in Sheboygan, Wis., entered its third year April 15 with the United Automible Workers' local claiming from the first day of the strike that the company refused to bargain collectively.

The dispute has been fought through courts, talked about by congressmen and considered by the National Labor Relations Board without signs of settlement.

In Richmond township the Civic Employees' Association has been advised by the Labor Relations Board that the municipal clerk, treasurer, social welfare administrator, assessor and building inspector are not "employees" within the meaning of the Labor Relations Act.

The board's decision followed the employees' request for an opinion, and an investigation by the board.

Flying Teeth From Log Saw Strike Owner

SIDNEY — Herbert Bradley, co-owner of the Bradley and Norbury sawmill at Saanichton, narrowly escaped serious injury Friday, when a log-holding dog came in contact with the whirling head-saw.

Mr. Bradley suffered superficial wounds in his head and chest when struck by flying saw teeth, some of which were found 150 feet from the scene of the accident.

He is chairman of the Sidney village commission.

Marine Cruelty Bared

Nine Instructors Tormented 'Boots'

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (UP)—The Marine Corps confirmed Saturday that nine drill instructors at this training base were court-martialed for maltreatment of recruits during the 15 months preceding a "disciplinary" march which led to the death of six marines in a swamp.

A four-member court of inquiry is looking into the night manoeuvre last Sunday in which six marine "boots" drowned when a drill instructor led his platoon into a chilly, tide-swollen swamp bordering this huge recruit training base.

S.Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon, 31, called the platoon out of the barracks but claimed he did so only to instill "discipline." The court of inquiry heard two witnesses Saturday, including Capt. Richard P. Grey, commanding officer of the company which included McKeon's platoon.

VERDICT MONDAY

Capt. Ralph Wood, Parris Island public information officer, said he did not expect the court to announce its findings "before Monday evening at the earliest."

Wood said six of the nine courts-martial since Jan. 1, 1955, for maltreatment resulted in convictions of the drill instructors but added that he did not recall the penalties levied on those found guilty.

Wood refused to disclose any details of the courts-martial, saying that he did not feel they should be made public from here.

In Washington, it was disclosed that one of the six convictions involved a sergeant accused of jumping on a recruit's stomach, kicking others in the stomach and chest, and beating a marine with a swagger stick.

The sergeant was given six months at hard labor and dishonorably discharged after being found guilty on 10 counts of cruelty and maltreatment.

TOUGHENING MUSCLES

Witnesses testified at the court-martial that the drill instructor jumped on a recruit's stomach 19 times while the youth was lying on the ground doing exercises. The sergeant claimed he was only trying to toughen the marine's stomach muscles.

On another occasion, the sergeant allegedly "mule-kicked" a recruit in the chest. He was also accused of hitting a marine 19 times with a swagger stick because it was the witness' 19th birthday. The sergeant admitted striking the boy but said it was only a light tap.

The Sunday night "death march" here brought a warning from Mayor Orville L. Hubbard of Dearborn, Mich., an ex-marine, that he would drive the Marine Corps out of his city if the court tries to "whitewash" the incident.

Where Are Jobs?

Everybody Rushes For $800-a-Month

VANCOUVER (CP)—A flood of workers from every section of British Columbia, seeking $800 a month jobs on the Distant Early Warning radar line, has rolled over employment offices throughout B.C., National Employment Service officials said Saturday.

William Horrobin, regional employment officer for B.C. and the Yukon, said applicants are "writing, wiring and visiting our offices and there's nothing we can do for them."

"We have 22 offices in B.C. and the Yukon and they're all howling . . . that the applications are piling up."

The flood started almost immediately after a recent report from Ottawa telling of civilian jobs paying as much as $800 a month open to Canadians on the DEW line.

The United States agency operating the line promised to list job requirements with the NES but hasn't done so yet, Mr. Horrobin said.

British Policy Coming

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Anthony Eden's government is formulating a new policy to save the peace in the Middle East and bolster waning British prestige in the strategic region, informed sources said yesterday.

The new policy is designed to hold fast to present friends, win uncommitted nations away from Egypt's anti-Western bloc, and hold the line in future rows in the Middle East power struggle, observers reported.

Children Found Slain

HALIFAX (CP)—A month-old infant was stabbed to death Saturday night in a north-end tenement and its mother, whom police refuse to identify, was later admitted to a mental hospital.

Police said a charge may be laid later.

The woman went to a doctor and a clergyman before being taken into custody by police. She was examined by a psychiatrist and admitted to the Nova Scotia provincial mental hospital.

Her husband, who found the child's body on the floor of their apartment, was treated in hospital for shock.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Two young children today were strangled in their home with two pieces of clothesline.

Police charged their adoptive mother, Mrs. Mary Campbell, 45, with murder. She was reported to have tried also to take her own life by slashing her wrists. She is to be arraigned Monday.

Paul, 11, and Martina, 9, adopted children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell, were found dead by police. Mr. Campbell, a clerk in a London law firm, was away at the time.

Police said preliminary investigations indicated the mother had suffered a mental breakdown but she appeared composed when taken into custody.

Startling Disclosure

Warships Can't Berth To Load At New Rocky Point Arsenal

Lighters Needed For All Operations

Canada's new multi-million dollar naval arsenal at Rocky Point cannot load ammunition aboard a single warship from its jetty, naval authorities last night told Tom Green, Colonist Ottawa correspondent.

RCN ships cannot berth at the jetty, but must be serviced by lighters brought from Esquimalt each time a ferry operation to and from the naval magazine to the vessels is needed.

In all heavy weather, loading or unloading operations at the exposed promontory would have to be suspended completely, they said.

The startling disclosure about the magazine that Defence Minister Ralph Campney has lauded as better than anything Russia or the Commonwealth has to offer, followed a series of questions put on the House of Commons order paper by Major-General G. R. Pearkes, VC, MP.

SAFETY PRECAUTION

It was learned by the Colonist that the arsenal jetty was designed for loading by lighters, following an intensive survey which failed to turn up a site suitable for berthing heavy warships yet was out of danger's way from Victoria should the $5,000,000 arsenal be attacked.

General Pearkes, who has strongly opposed the site, about 20 miles from Victoria, since it was chosen over three years ago, is seeking information about the cost of construction of the jetty and its suitability for ammunitioning and de-ammunition RCN vessels

He also is inquiring about the suitability of the lighters employed from Esquimalt for the purpose.

Reports when the petty was being constructed in 1954 said it would cost in the neighborhood of $115,000.

CAMPNEY'S PRAISE

The magazine, replacing the old ammunition dump at Colwood to fill all ordinance demands of Pacific Command ships, was lauded by Mr. Campney last July as "the finest magazine in the Commonwealth."

"I doubt if the Russians have anything better," he said on a visit here.

Sharply opposite view has been taken all along by General Pearkes, who has criticized the site for being exposed and difficult to defend.

He was quoted three years ago as saying: "As it is outside the inner defences of Esquimalt harbor, ships that come into Esquimalt harbor will be required to move around to Rocky Point."

". . . it will mean that the vessels which have been in Esquimalt will have to go out again" over the "considerable distance" in a time-wasting operation to load ammunition, he said then.

SITE DEFENDED

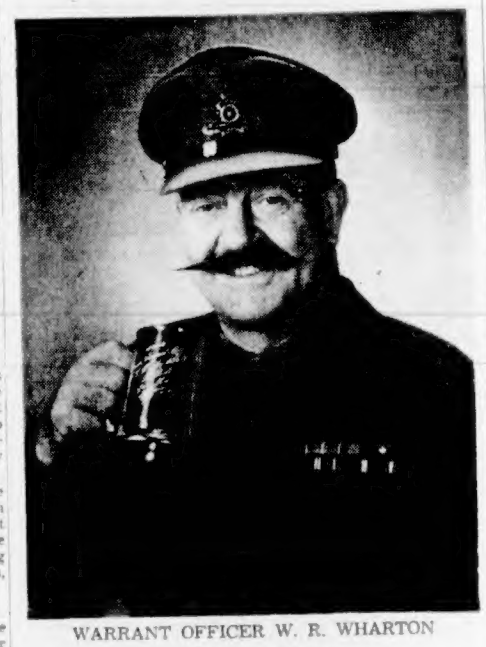
Campney had defended the site as being far enough out for safety purposes, with suitable terrain for the type of construction planned, yet close to Esquimalt "which facilitates transportation of ammunition from ships coming in for maintenance or overhaul."

The arsenal, including the magazines, jetty, laboratories and the mile of asbestos-lined passageways that connect them, cost $5,000,000. It covers 3,000 acres near William head.

General Pearkes has said that the total cost of construction of buildings, ammunition stores and jetties of the Colwood ammunition dump in 1939 was $413,742, "insofar as existing records show."

Reason for moving the dump was that the area was becoming too close to heavily populated districts for safety.

Retires in Good Order



WARRANT OFFICER W. R. WHARTON

Steps Down

'The Bull' at Ease After 30 Years

W. R. "The Bull" Wharton pulled at his waxed handlebar mustache and sank into his "lazyboy" chair.

One of the best-known warrant officers in the Canadian army, whom many Victorians never knew to spend an idle moment, retired in Edmonton last week after more than 30 years' service. He was presented with a "lazyboy" chair and inscribed mug by fellow members of the sergeants' mess.

"The Bull," who looked it, was known here and all over Canada in military and sporting circles.

He joined the 5th Heavy Battery (Coastal Defence) here in 1930, and served with the unit until going overseas in 1939 to assist in the formation of the 1st Canadian Army Reinforcement Unit as garrison sergeant-major. More than 80,000 men passed through the unit while he was in that position, from outbreak of hostilities until 1946.

A member of the Canadian rugby team which toured Japan in 1932, he captained the Victoria team against the New Zealand "All Blacks" in 1936. He was captain of the team from 1931 until his retirement from sports in 1937.

WO1 Wharton was born in Ulverston, England, in 1904. He joined the King's Own Royal Lancashire Regiment in 1920, and in 1924 transferred to the King's Own Royal Coldstream Guards with whom he served until leaving for Canada in 1927.

Since the war, he has been garrison sergeant-major at three army camps, the last being at Headquarters, Western Command, Edmonton.

Special Session Possible

PENTICTON (CP) — A special session of the B.C. legislature will be called this fall if necessary to draft new forest management legislation, Premier Bennett said Friday night.

He said date of the session will depend on when the Sloan report on the B.C. forest industry is presented to him.

"We will take the time to consider it but if there is an urgent call for new legislation then a special session or an earlier session than usual will be called," he said in an interview.

The premier said he is anxious to get B.C.'s questioned forest program going again "on a permanent basis that is fair to everyone."

Canadian Beavers Missing, Grace in Palace Seclusion

MONTE CARLO (CP) — Grace Kelly and a couple of Canadian beavers were among the more elusive elements in Monaco yesterday as the principality started a weekend of celebration in preparation for the American actress' wedding next week to Prince Rainier III.

Miss Kelly arrived two days earlier, but since then many of her American friends with personal invitations to the wedding have discovered that the walls of Rainier's palace are even thicker than they look.

Neither the guests—nor even the bridesmaids — have managed an exchange of hellos with their friend since she took up residence in the 120-room palace overlooking the Mediterranean. The palace switchboard has stalled all efforts to get through to the princess-to-be.

Meanwhile, Jean Bruchesi, a Canadian guest who is a member of Monaco's literary council, had an appointment at the palace yesterday. He said he would try to find out what happened to the two beavers which the city of Granby, Que., sent across the ocean by air as a wedding gift.

"I know they have left Quebec and I have heard a rumor that they have arrived in Nice," he told a reporter Friday night, "but I have so far been unable to trace them."

The living Canadian national emblems were last reported in Paris, where they landed Thursday after a flight from Montreal. But Bruchesi, an historian who also is Quebec's deputy provincial secretary, wasn't too worried.

"I feel sure that any conversation I may have with Prince Rainier will concern beavers," he said, "for he is a keen zoologist."

PIERRE AND PIERRETTE

Vancouver First in Canada To Have Pay-as-You-See TV

VANCOUVER (CP)—J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, said yesterday Vancouver will be the first city in Canada to get "pay-as-you-see" television movies.

He was here to arrange for a studio location that will transmit regular feature movies by direct wire into Vancouver homes. It will be the first closed domestic circuit of a commercial scale on the continent, he said.

"We will be surprised if we're not in operation by this time next year. The day of the small neighborhood theatre is finished, he said.

Subscribers will be able to obtain the service by depositing coins in a "telemeter" box on the back of television sets.

Vancouver was selected for the experiment because "it is recognized as the toughest marketing city on the continent.

"If it works here," he added, "it will have a good chance elsewhere."

Community Service

Starting Friday

Flower Sharing To Cheer Patients

Bouquets of bright yellow daffodils will carry the breath of spring into the wards of Victoria's two major hospitals this week as The Daily Colonist again sponsors the popular Share the Flowers plan.

Daffodils from springtime gardens in the Greater Victoria area will be collected Friday and distributed by the Colonist among patients in Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals.

For the third successive year the plan is being organized by the Colonist as a community service.

Share the Flowers gives Victoria residents an opportunity of sharing the overflow of blooms from their gardens with hospital patients deprived of the pleasures of gardening.

The plan has always been generously supported by home gardeners who have used its facilities to cheer thousands of hospital patients and nursing home shut-ins over the years.

Hospital officials like the plan, too, welcoming every chance to see happiness spread through their wards.

Daffodils will be collected from donors Friday morning and be immediately taken to the two hospitals.

Gardeners with more flowers than they need for their own homes are asked to phone the Colonist at 3-4111 before 2 p.m. Thursday.

Volunteer drivers again will be needed to collect flowers and bring them to a central collection point. Each driver will be given a short list of addresses where flowers will be available.

Drivers able to assist are requested to phone the Colonist by 5 p.m. Wednesday.
